Mr. Tepo is surrounded by admirers like Lisa Bowden, Melissa Lusk, Geri Clark, Steve Benson, Daryl Gibboney and Vickie Burrow.

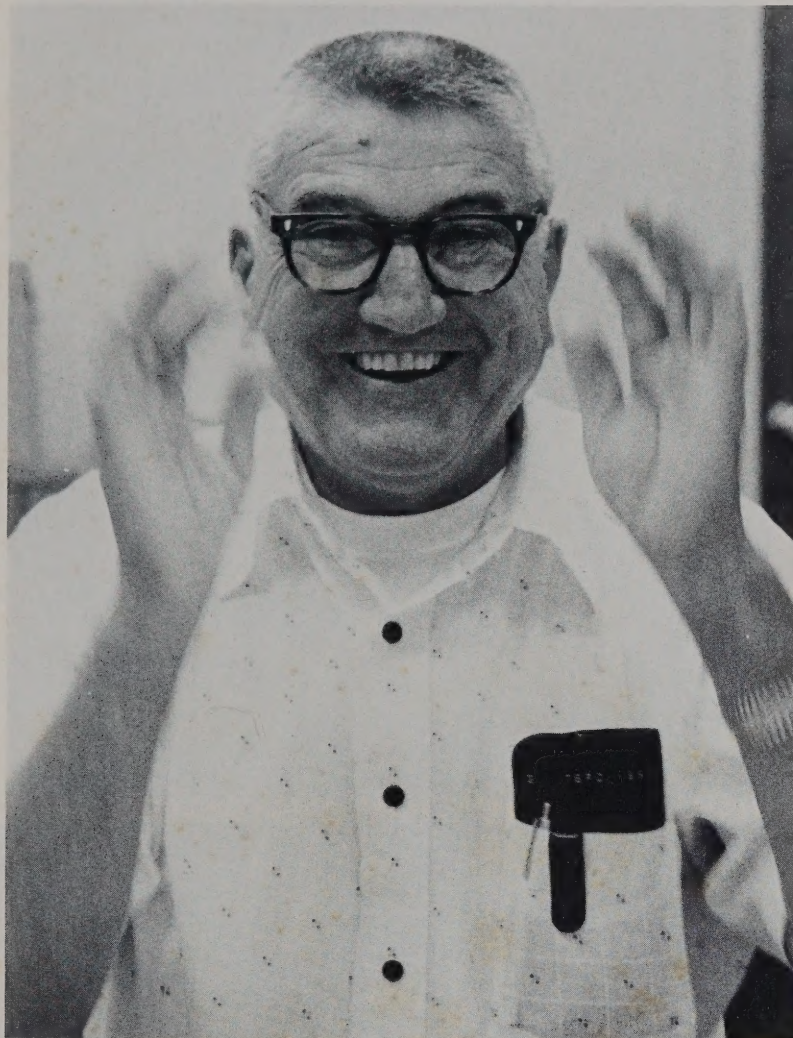

A twinkle in his eye — that's Mr. Tepo.

An empty office full of memories.

Mr. Tepo has a cheerful word for everyone.

A Man For All Seasons

As Kellam High School enters its 18th year, a year of many changes, nothing has affected the students and faculty more than the absence of George Tepo. A teacher and then an assistant principal at Kellam since the day it first opened its doors, Mr. Tepo was transferred to another area high school in July of 1979. With his departure, Kellam lost a man who had always devoted his life to making those around him happier people.

Mr. Tepo's time has never been his own; it belongs to the problems and needs of the teachers and students with whom he works. He was at Kellam by 6:00 A.M. every day; sometimes his door didn't finally close until late in the evening. He listened to every story with patience and understanding; no problem was too big or too small for Mr. Tepo to handle.

In those seventeen years, he successfully played many roles: disciplinarian, friend, confidante, advisor, and instructor. Mr. Tepo was Kellam. For those who were fortunate enough to share even a small part of his time at Kellam, he will always rank high among men. It is sad but true that the "... world seldom hears of its greatest men."

Chris,

I just met you this year and its been fun. Hope to

The Curtain Rises

On September 4, 1979, the curtain rises at 7:30 A.M. The setting, Kellam High School, is all but empty. Soon the familiar yellow school buses begin to arrive, the students begin pouring into the halls, the classrooms begin to fill, and the play is on.

In a matter of days, students and faculty settle into the routine of learning. Sophomores are welcomed by the S.C.A., who acquaint them with Kellam's many extracurricular activities. Painted faces emerge from the drama classes, and the school's musicians find the way to the band room.

All over school, boards become filled with punctuation exercises, math problems, and scientific formulae. Overhead projectors light the way to knowledge, and chemistry labs begin to emit foul odors. How quickly it all comes together and begins to function like a well-coiled machine. It is the 18th year for Kellam High School, and, in all respects, it is a perfect year.

In the S.C.A.'s welcome to sophomores, senior Doug Dion informs "Mr. Sophomore," Doug Carter, about the many activities at Kellam.

This may appear to be a tight fit, but Raynard Saunders and Paul Meise can handle their instruments in any situation.

When they send for the clowns, Kellam's ready with Diana Reardon, Kim David, and David Herbert.

No longer overrun with students, the courtyard offers a respite from the daily routine for Susan Crenshaw and Kathy Hensley.

"In a class by herself," Glenda Rose completes an assignment.

Experiencing the "new" feeling of space is cross-country runner Robert Carpenter.

Some things never change — "Hall passes, please."

The Script Revised

Kellam has functioned on many levels. At first it was a junior high and a senior high. Then it moved into serving only the 10th, 11th, and 12th grades and nearly outgrew itself. At one point, 13 portable classrooms were added to make room for the 2700 students. During another year, the school went on an 8-bell schedule with 2 separate shifts to accommodate the crowd. It must have seemed to the casual observer that Kellam students were destined to trip over one another forever.

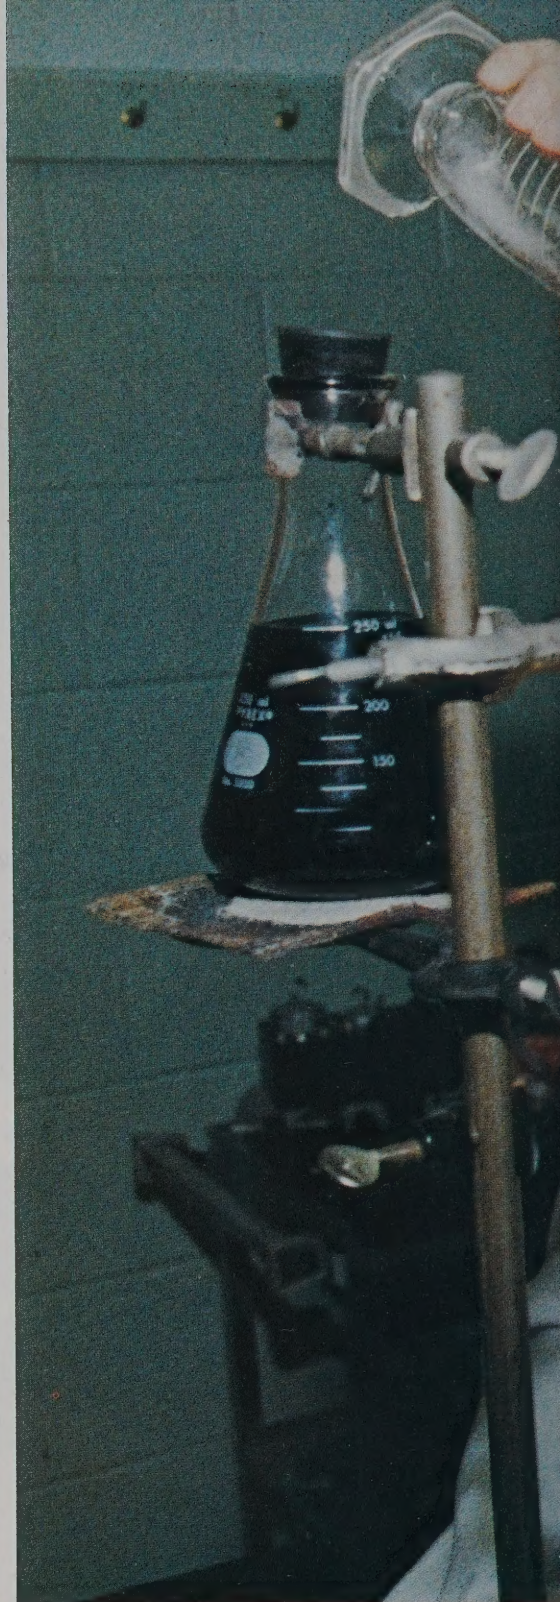

A reprieve has come, however, in the form of a new area high school, and the halls of Kellam echo with sighs of relief. Since approximately 1000 students have been transferred to the new campus, those who have remained at Kellam are experiencing many new things: halls without traffic jams, breezes circulating through not-packed-to-capacity-classrooms, and shorter lunch lines which make the period seem longer, leaving time for friendly chats or last-minute study.

At last, there is space available, a pleasant and beneficial change for Kellam, and an important aspect of the perfect year.

Shorter lines make lunch a more pleasant occasion for Mrs. Jackson, Gerald Ailstock, Cindi Rudolph, and Ronnie Suggs.

Leave it to Dale Rosenberg and Jim Sawyer to show how well black and gold go together.

Caught in the camera's eye, the cheerleaders show why everyone looks forward to their weekly performances.

Lee Wilson, Jacqui Thompson, and David Geiger are three of the Band's outstanding performers.

The Performance

"The welfare of all living creatures is tied in with the welfare of their common earth-home."

If "living creatures" is changed to "students" and "school" is substituted for "earth-home," this quotation applies well to Kellam. The students know that if they work hard to make their school a better place, they are bettering themselves in the process.

The students have set out to uphold the belief that "We're #1" in all aspects of school life, and they are laboring together toward this common goal. Challenges are met through involvement and action. For instance, an enthusiastic group of cheerleaders lead the Kellam fans in support of their teams. The band thrills the crowd and impresses the judges in perfect performances on the field. Students unite to discover mutual interests and advance toward maturity through acceptance of responsibility.

The students have created strong bonds, resulting in a contagious school spirit which is shown at every game and in every project.

Chris, we've had a blast in P.E. this year. You have really made it a great class. You are a super nice and crazy person I hope to see you over the summer! Keep in touch: 4566860

If all goes according to schedule, the typical school day for a Kellam student is neatly divided into five acts. As the drama begins, the students are on the road to success — that is, in the process of getting to school. There are various methods used to accomplish this feat: school buses, bikes, car pools, and driving alone. No matter what means is used for traveling to school, the object is the same for all — class at 8:00 A.M.

The setting for the second act is the classroom, the focal point of the school day. For some, it is the most difficult part of the day; for others, it is the most interesting. The students learn many things during their classroom hours which will benefit them the rest of their lives. Certainly, all do not gain the same amount of knowledge, but there is one thing that every student learns — help is just around the corner.

"Help," as Act III may be called, is no less than lunch time. This is the time during the day when students get together with their friends, relax as a rule, enjoy the good cafeteria food, and "take a break." It is usually a fun time and a part of the day that each student looks forward to eagerly. Dessert may be another class or two, but it isn't long before the 2:00 bell rings and students move into the 4th phase of the day.

Act IV, unfortunately, does not involve all the students because it consists of after-school activities. During this time, clubs meet, athletes train, performers practice, students make up work or receive extra help, and some just take a few moments to recuperate before going home or to their jobs. Those who take part in Act IV contribute a great deal to the perfect year which Kellam enjoys.

Also contributing greatly to the school's successful year are the students who participate in Act V, which consists of the evening performances. These showstoppers create floats for the Homecoming parade, sing and dance in play productions and concerts, and display their athletic abilities on gym floors and football fields. These events are the highlights of the year and most often the results of many hours of preparation. They are the proud moments, the ones most likely to be remembered in the years to come.

Hopefully, these lone drivers arriving at school won't be struck by the "Curse of the Empty Car."

The cross guard keeps traffic moving smoothly.

The Road To Success

This is one bumper sticker which is much in demand.

In the past, students either walked to school or rode horses. Today, school buses are the number one way of getting to school. Every September, students begin the daily routine of waiting for the yellow monster, the most dependable method used to transport students to school.

There is also the carpool, a solid institution in America. It saves gas, eases traffic congestion, and reduces pollution; it also gives parents a chance to drive the car.

A third method of travel down the road to success is driving alone, but beware of the "Curse of the Empty Car" which assures that any student who arrives at school with an empty car will not leave that way. The curse will only be lifted when each student has his own car.

Once the student has his parking sticker and learns the rules governing driving to school or riding the bus, he is on his way.

Car pooling is a necessary way to go during the gas crunch.

Learning Their Lines

Every class has a clown, but Diana Reardon is carrying it just a bit too far!

Every student at Kellam is involved in the pursuit of knowledge. Classes are 50 minutes long and cover many subjects.

In addition to the required courses in English and social studies, 4 foreign languages, all levels of math, and several lab sciences are offered. Students can learn a variety of office skills through Business Department classes, and vocational skills are taught in Industrial Arts. Practical skills such as cooking and sewing are taught in the Home Economics courses.

For those interested in the arts, Kellam offers a number of courses. There are music courses which range from music theory to band. Future Van Goghs can take up to 5 levels of art, and the potential authors at Kellam can perfect their skills in Creative Writing.

No matter what field a student wishes to enter, Kellam offers him the basic knowledge he needs.

Mr. Correll assists Rickie Williams and Mike Cardwell in preparing for the next band performance.

Careful concentration is what Tony Fisher needs while working with industrial equipment.

Practice is the key to success in Mrs. Pohler's Typing class.

Lora Davis, Sherri Phillips, Elaine Harris, Randy Roberts, Melanie Black and Tracy Cannon are dying to be "alive" on the stage.

Take Five

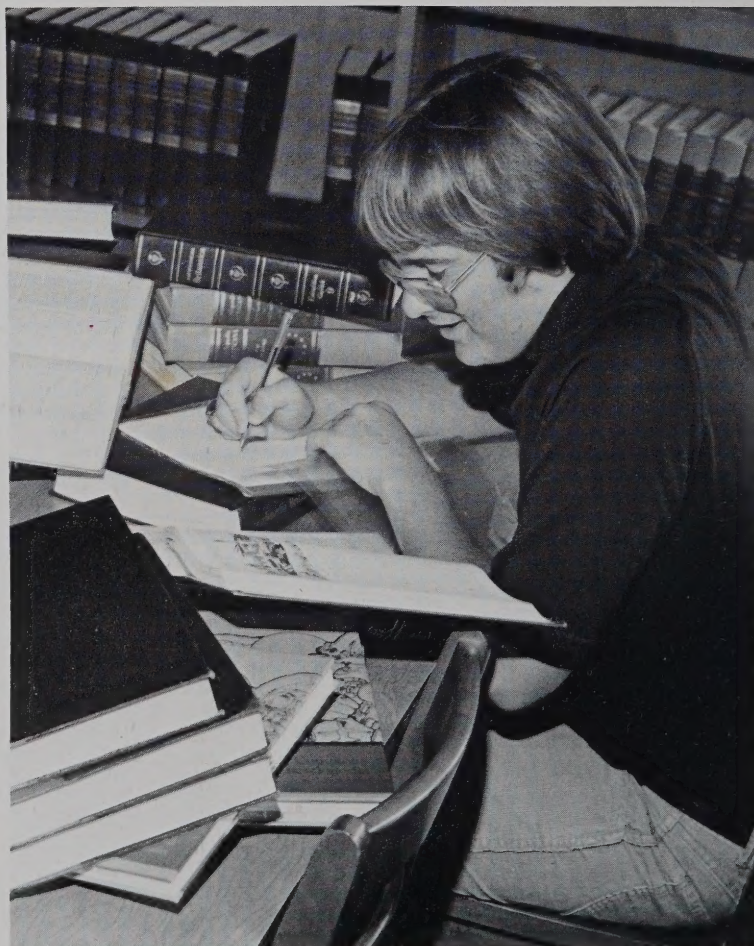

Lunch hour at Kellam is a welcome break from the daily routine for students and teachers. It is often the only time friends are able to socialize with one another. There are many ways for students to spend the noon hour and make it a fun part of the day.

After a hurried meal, some students head for the library to finish homework. Others stroll the campus, enjoying the fresh air and the change of scenery. Some students gather at the cafeteria entrance where some kind of ticket is being sold, or some sort of competition is being conducted.

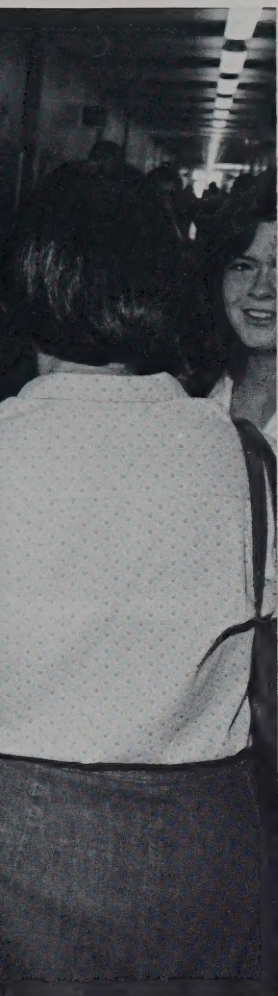

Whatever they choose to do, most students enjoy lunch time.

Derek Rex skips lunch in order to complete an assignment.

More than just food is sold during lunch as demonstrated here by Becky Gressley, Debbie Cimmerman, and Brenda Neidzwiedz.

Once the good food has been devoured, there's plenty of time left for socializing with friends.

One final gulp of milk puts the finishing touch to a perfect meal for Thad Kimble as Zane Gray watches.

Barbara Poole, Annette Gaskill, and Kim Williams take advantage of the sunny day and Mighty Bite lunches.

Working on the Citizen of the Month showcase are Laura VanHorne, Scott Hughes, and Elena Brooks.

Tammi Simmons and Brenda Niedzwiedz scalp the walls after school.

David Larson runs through the hours after school.

Suzan Brown rests her feet after a long school day.

It's many after-school hours of practice for Bernie Blanks and Clay McNutt.

Rehearsal

In the hours that follow the end of the school day, many activities take place around Kellam High School.

During these after-school sessions, clubs meet to plan their projects. National Honor Society students use this time to set up their Citizen of the Month display, the cheerleaders decorate the halls with banners, numerous other clubs put up posters which announce their drives or contests, Drama Club members invade the stage for hours of practice for upcoming plays, and the school's athletes train for their competitions.

Other students use this rather quiet time to reflect on the day's labors or to recover from them. They relax, socialize, or take advantage of the empty classrooms and make up work or get extra help from teachers.

Regardless of their purposes for staying after school, students enjoy and benefit from these few hours.

The Big Black Marching Band

Curtain Calls

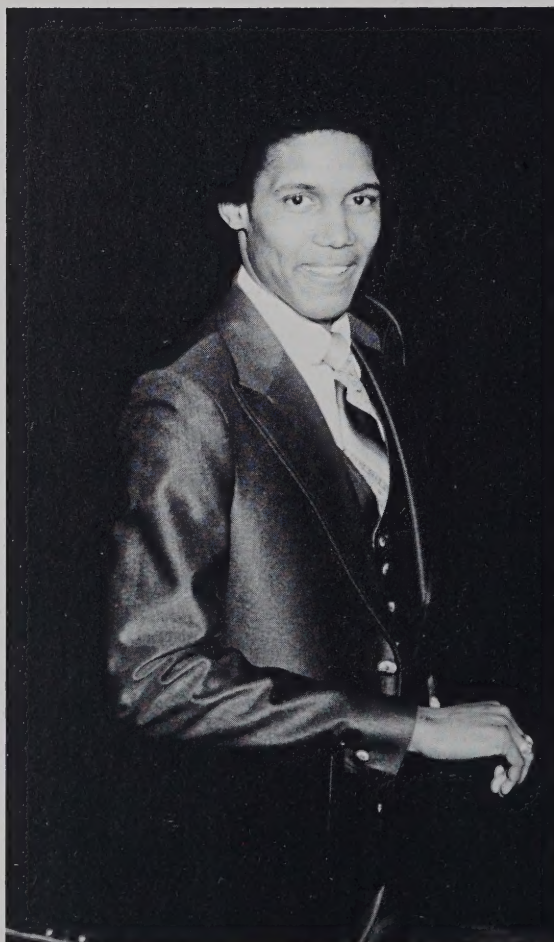

Anyone who thinks that school concludes with the 2:00 p.m. bell has not spent much time around Kellam! There are many things at night at Kellam, and students find themselves spending a lot of time on the campus.

If a student is sports oriented, he can attend the night football games, wrestling matches, gymnastics, and basketball games. Perhaps the biggest nighttime event related to sports is the Kellam Homecoming. It is one evening that most students remember.

For those students who enjoy the arts, there are many opportunities for evening entertainment at Kellam. The Drama department and the Choral department provide musical extravaganzas throughout the year.

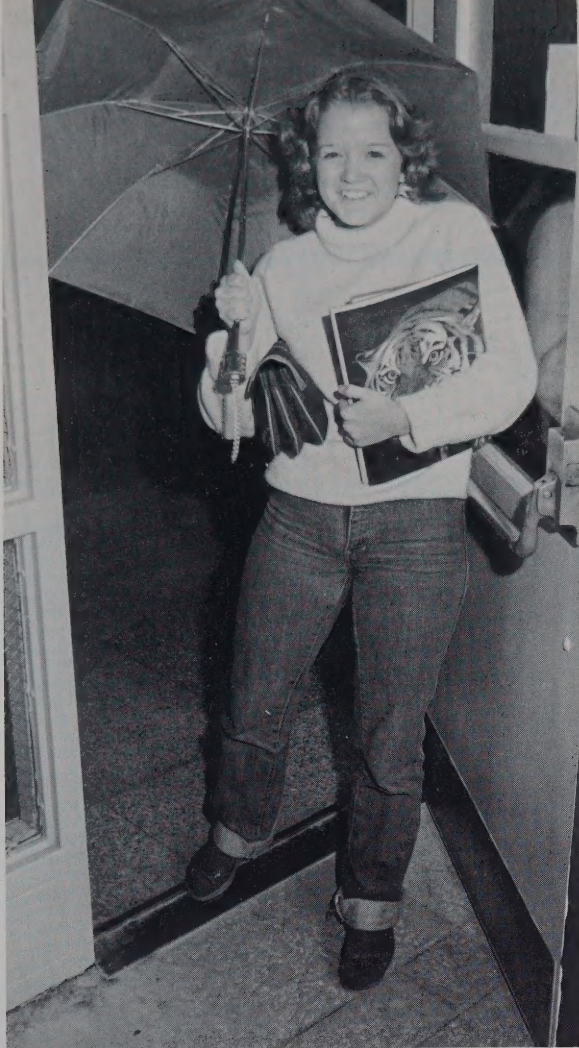

Especially enjoyable are the performances by Kellam's Marching Band, Stage Band, Wind Ensemble, and Concert Band.

Nighttime at Kellam can make for the end of a perfect day.

Evening entertainment by such Madrigals as Kelvin Cooper delights Kellam students.

Julie Pearson heads into the night after a late club meeting.

Smoking Joe Frazier pays an early evening visit to Kellam.

The Kellam Knight, Clay McNutt, Promotes spirit at a football game.

Homecoming Queen, Debbie Carroll, is driven around the Kellam track.

Essential to the success of any dramatic presentation is the director. His competence, enthusiasm, and ability to relate to cast members are the ingredients necessary for an award winning production.

At Kellam, fortunately, there is an entire staff of directors who not only work well together, but also have excellent communication with the cast members. Though they wear different titles - Principal, Assistant Principal, Guidance Counselor, Teacher - they function as one and provide the leadership and guidance which is needed. In fact, were it not for this superb group of people, it is doubtful that Kellam's year would be as good as it is.

The major role of the Kellam directors is the evaluation of cast performance, but this year they must prepare to evaluate their own performances as well. They are entering a two year period of self-study which involves them in the serious assessment of the school's overall academic program. Committees whose members represent various departments have been formed, and meetings are taking place on a weekly basis. The self-study is proving to be a very interesting and beneficial experience for the faculty members.

The Directors are enthusiastic and interesting people. They support the students in many ways and strive to make learning a rewarding experience.

THE DIRECTORS

After years of evaluating others, these directors, Diane Moscatello, Peggy Middleton, Mary Allen, and Betsy Darst, are looking forward to changing roles.

Five to Three: Kellam Loses Two

Having lost two members of the administrative staff, Mr. George Tepo and Mr. Ralph Sykes, due to the reduced enrollment, the remaining administrators have quickly and efficiently absorbed the duties left by the vacancies. Assistant Principals Joseph Wisniewski and Joanne Belda are sharing the responsibilities of instruction and discipline. Miss Belda is in charge of the lockers, keys, and study halls. Mr. Wisniewski has taken on the transportation and scheduling problems. As always, Mr. Themides, the principal, is involved in every phase of running the school.

More duties among fewer people calls for cooperation and compatability. This is achieved with the help of an efficient secretarial staff who act as liaisons between the different parts of the school body. They handle attendance procedures and communication between parents and administraton. They are the center of attention during a school day and work hard to please administrators, faculty, and students.

Also working hard to help Kellam have a perfect year are Mrs. Cramer, the Bookkeeper, Mr. Ammons, the School Activities Coordinator, and Mr. Wayne Sykes, the In-School Suspension Coordinator.

These very capable directors are the reason that Kellam is #1.

Where One Can Find Good Counsel

Students seldom arrive at school knowing everything they need to know. When questions do arise, two of the best places to find answers are the library and the guidance office. Both are equipped with resource and reference books, facts galore, and experienced staffs.

Another source of help for students is the school nurse. Always smiling, cool and calm on all occasions, she heals, comforts, and counsels.

One group which has taken on the role of advisors this year is the Steering Committee. Made up of Richard Baker, Peggy Middleton, Kelly McCoy, Wilma Egas, Gail Nicholson, and Joseph Wisniewski, this committee is spearheading the teachers' self-study.

No matter what problem or question might arise, the Kellam students and faculty are in good hands.

Book Now For Lower Fare

The big news in English this year is that the "old news" in English is back. Students are using a new book which contains many of the traditional methods for teaching grammar. There are pages devoted to the diagramming of sentences and scores of exercises relating to the age-old rules of grammar. The book is exciting because students now have a handy reference book to see them through their college years, and teachers have a new and effective teaching tool. The English department devoted an entire school day to the discussion of the book and mapped out plans for using it effectively.

Also new for English students this year is the lower fee. This is another result of the reduced enrollment which has left the English department with an ample number of literature books. It pleases both English teachers and the parents of English students that the lowering of the fee is possible.

The English department, which has always produced students who score well on statewide tests, is looking forward to another successful year. Devoted and knowledgeable, they are tops among Kellam directors.

A Social Plus is A Studies' Loss

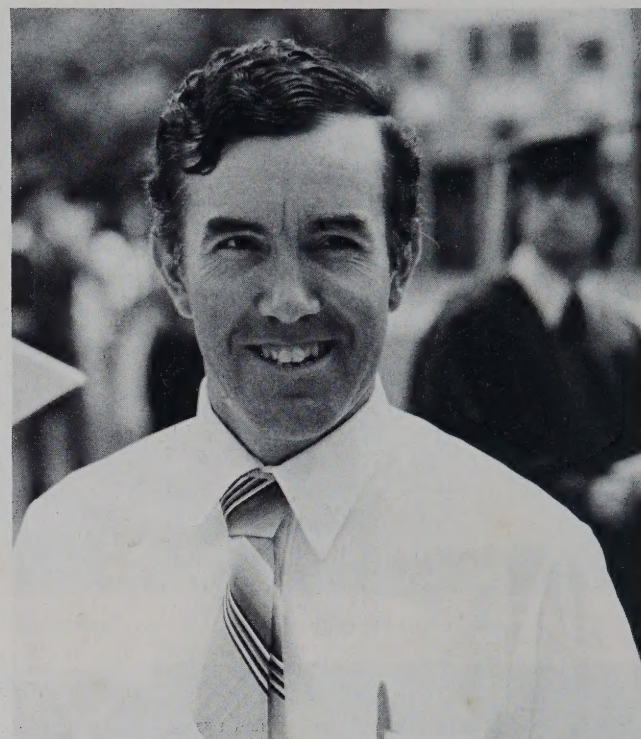

Although the reduced enrollment has brought such benefits as smaller class size and more time for individualized instruction, in the Social Studies department it has created a definite minus. As a result of the loss of so many students, three important elective courses have been dropped. These courses, International Relations, Economics, and Advance Placement History, were taught by Mrs. Ann Rowan.

A very definite plus for the Social Studies department this year is the creation of a workroom for their exclusive use. In the past, they have shared a room with the English department, but now they have a large, attractive room of their own in which they can plan their lessons, run their dittos, and relax.

The entire department hosted a Greek salad luncheon for Mr. Themides to express their appreciation.

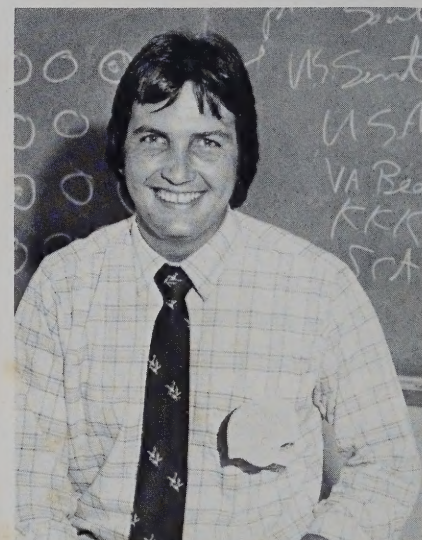

History and government teachers are delighted that they have new, very up-dated books to teach from this year.

An infinite variety of courses is offered to the Kellam student. If he so desires, he can wend his way through France, Germany, Spain, or, if he is a truly energetic soul, he can conquer Gaul with the mighty Caesar. All of these trips, of course, can be taken on a daily fifty minute basis by enrolling in any of the lively Foreign Language classes.

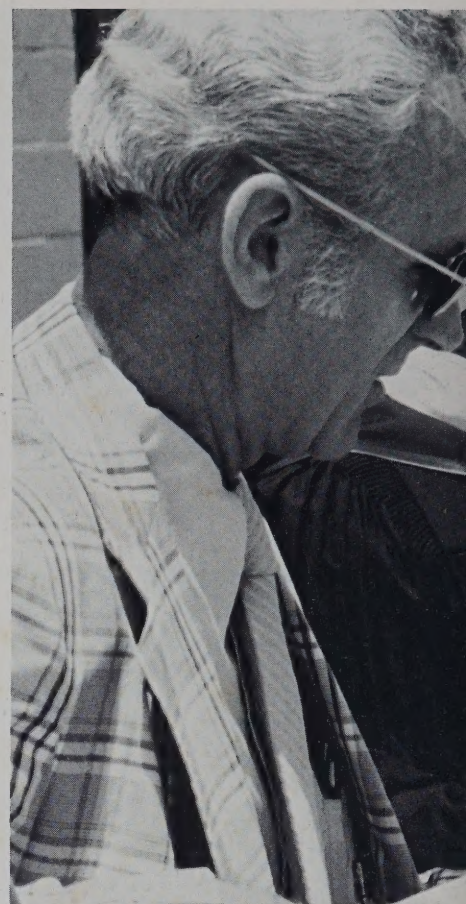

On the other hand, if the student would rather stay close to home, he can concentrate his efforts in the kitchen and learn all he needs to know in the Home Economics classes. After he has perfected his culinary skills, he can join an Art class and satisfy his taste for the Arts.

The student, if he so desires, can march his way through school as part of an R.O.T.C. unit, or direct his energies to the working world and earn a credit or two in a Distributive Education class.

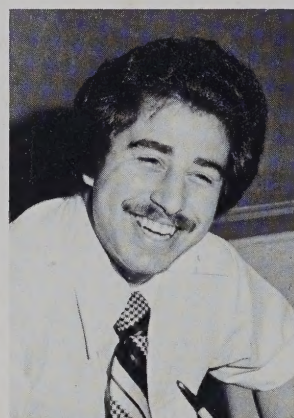

All of these courses are enriching and rewarding.

Not the Types Who Wood Metal

Confined to the far reaches of the school campus, the Industrial Arts department and the Business department are unique. Because they are so far removed from the mainstream, these faculty members are rarely seen. Of course, the nature of their individual courses would necessarily keep them close to home anyway. When the bell rings to end class, these teachers are busy checking machinery and other equipment and setting up for the next bell. In both departments, classes are active and interesting for the students, and the teachers are totally committed to preparing their students for the future.

Many jobs will be open for the students who complete courses in either Business or Industrial Arts. They are departments which are essential to the total educational process, and Kellam is proud of the outstanding job that these department members do.

A Trio of Cymbals

Life can be difficult if one does not know his +’s and -’s. At Kellam, a student can learn all the math he needs. To prepare for the future, he should include math among his subjects.

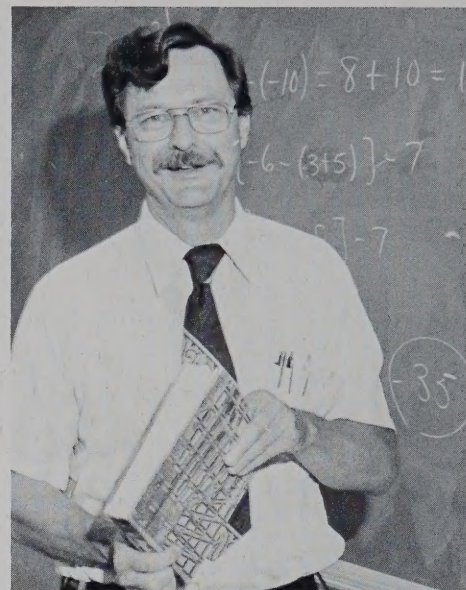

If a student has learned his numbers, he will probably never have to sing for his supper. However, it wouldn’t hurt to practice a few bars in Chorus class. Once he knows his #’s and b’s, he can learn to play an instrument in Band. The Music department is a good place for a student to put his act together.

A student can test his #mind in a science class. He can study Au and Ag and make a fortune in the future.

These three departments offer a student a chance to fit in well in today’s society.

Mold, Master, Mix and Mop

One of the functions of the Physical Education department is to mold character. Students in P.E. classes are taught to be competitive and sportsmanlike. They learn to accept defeat with grace. The P.E. classes are necessary for the development of mature individuals.

Special Education students are prepared for their roles in society. They learn to master skills that will help them to succeed in their chosen fields. The Special Education department is a valuable asset to the school's overall education program.

If every school were to be judged by its cafeteria staff, Kellam would be on top. These ladies work hard to prepare delicious meals for lunch. Besides mixing ingredients, these smiling ladies bring a kind word and a happy face to all who come in contact with them.

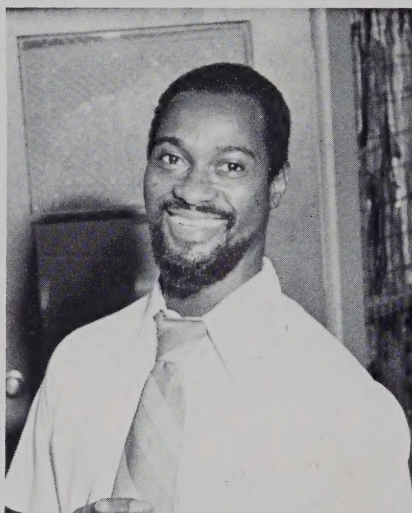

Every visitor to Kellam is impressed with our neat and clean school. This is due to the very capable staff who work through the day. They mop, sweep, polish and scrub. Thanks to them, Kellam is a very attractive school.

Being a part of the Kellam student body is a privilege and a responsibility. Each student plays at least two roles — one as a class member and the other as a representative of the school. Depending on the high school year involved, these roles have different requirements.

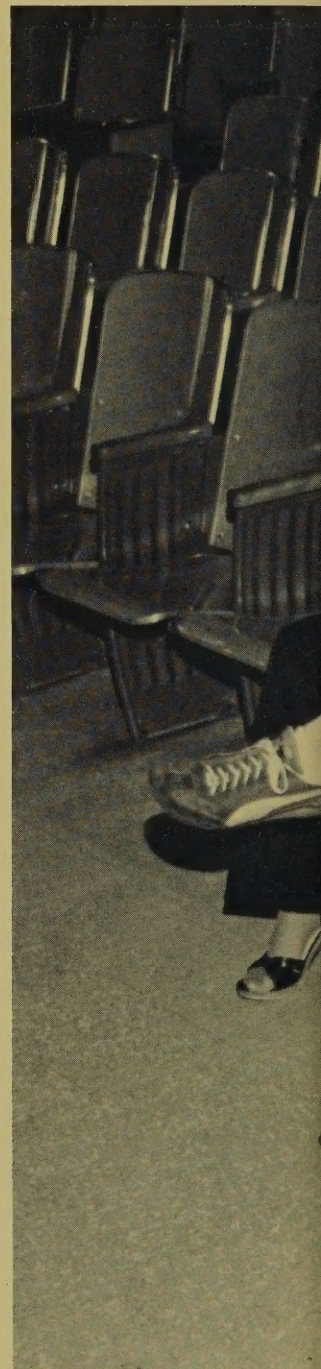

Young and eager, sophomores reach high school and waste no time becoming a part of things. They enter sports with all the enthusiasm common to new recruits. After proving themselves to be hard workers and tough competitors, they often move into starting positions and become invaluable team members. They also join the clubs at Kellam and spend this first year learning about them and contributing a great deal of time and energy to the school's organizations.

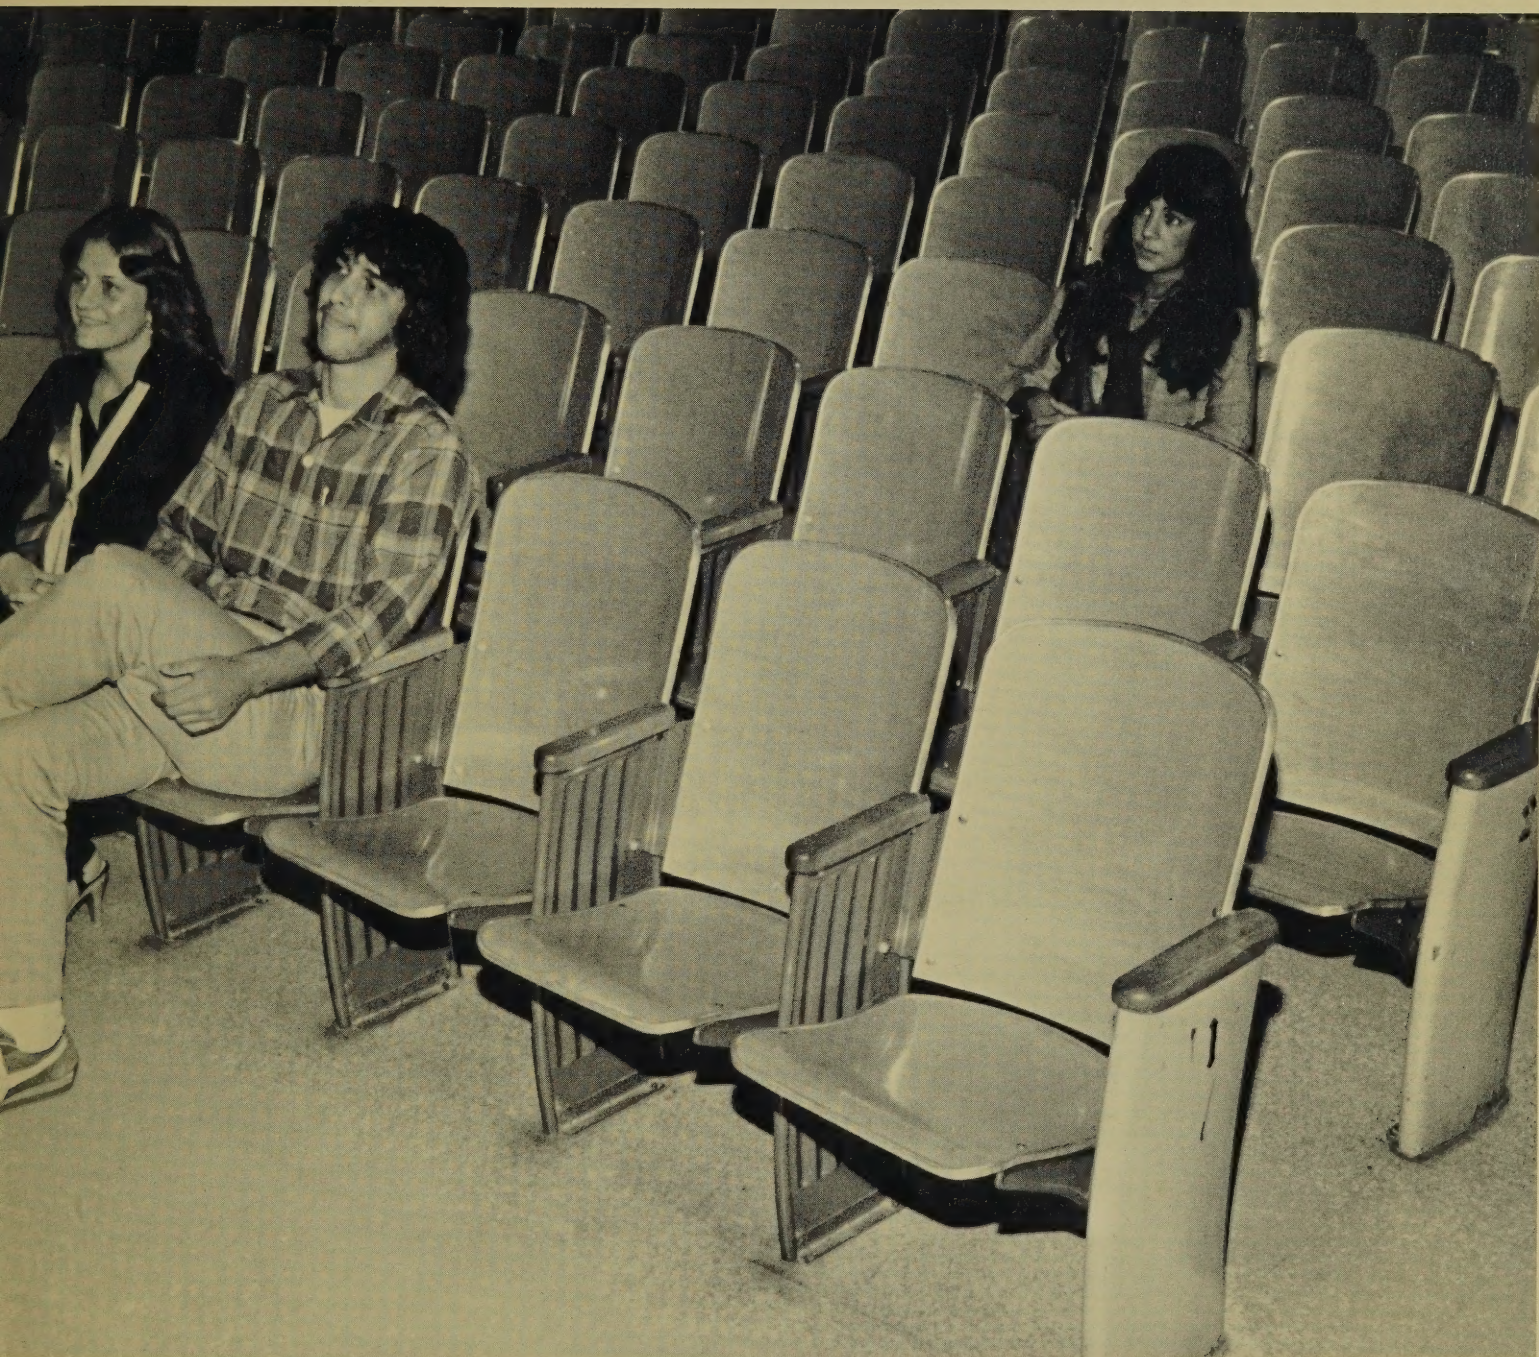

Juniors have one of the hardest roles to play. They have to help seniors run the school, and they have to teach sophomores how to fill the supporting positions when they become juniors. They are often the most involved people around the school for several reasons. Fewer Juniors have part-time jobs like the seniors, and they are not dependent on the school bus for transportation like the sophomores are. The juniors, on the whole, are a vital organ in the school's student body.

At the top of the student ladder are the seniors. The most exciting time of the high school career, the senior year also has a serious side. Seniors must use this year to map out their futures by deciding about furthering their education, entering a branch of the service, or beginning a career. They must also face the financial burden of being a senior. Graduation announcements, caps and gowns, the senior prom, and senior pictures make large dents in the wallets of seniors. On the lighter side, seniors enjoy some special privileges. They have reserved cafeteria seats, attend most of the school's assemblies, can be exempt from final exams, and have a Senior Week devoted to them. Seniors have a very full year which goes much too quickly. The final day, Graduation Day, is usually a mixture of happiness and sadness. It is, however, what being a senior is all about.

Each student at Kellam is a unique individual, but he is also an integral part of his class and of the school. Being part of the Kellam cast is a rewarding experience.

THE CAST

Members of the cast, Pam Anderson, Henry Pearson, and Nannette Quinonez, look forward to the performance.

Welcome to Kellam

Every year, it happens. Every year, hordes of new students who haven't the slightest idea about what's going on, arrive at Kellam.

These students, better known as sophomores, quickly become immersed in the Kellam whirlwind of sports, classes, clubs, and everyday activities. Upperclassmen and groups such as the SCA lend helping hands to the new arrivals, introducing them to the "Knight Life".

Almost immediately, the sophomores are given their first task: elect sophomore class officers. Soon five new Knights find themselves in charge of organizing the Sophomore Senate. It's not an easy job.

First on the agenda for the new senate are discussions on the Crystal Ball, which is usually held in the cafeteria. Expenses need to be covered, and money-making ideas are discussed and voted upon. The result is a decision to raise capital by selling buttons to their classmates.

A busy, active group, the 10th grade class is a welcomed addition to Kellam.

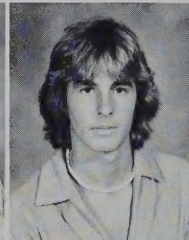

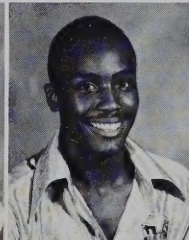

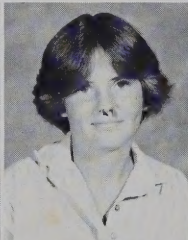

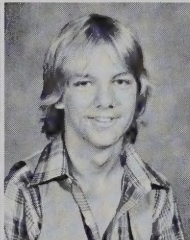

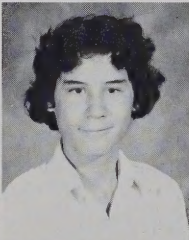

A school to be proud of.

Where the Knights come to cheer.

Jimmy Bowman, a proud sophomore.

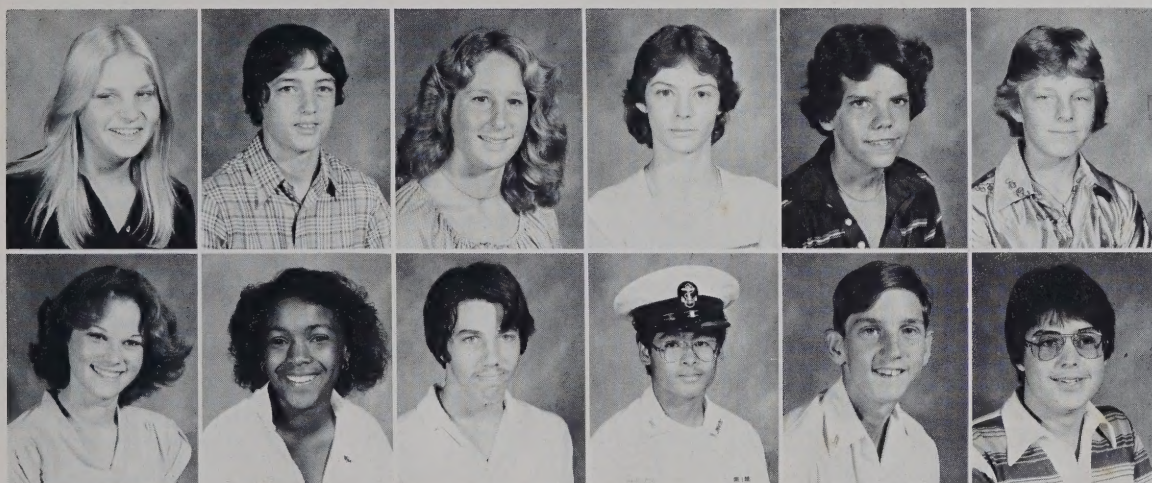

Knight Victory

The dream of every junior high football star is to make it big in high school sports. Junior high sports are a great start, but high school is where the scouts come to look for future college stars. Sophomores want to do their best in the three years ahead of them.

Sophomores at Kellam have been faced with a hardship for many years. Without a junior varsity program, sophomores are forced to compete with seniors and juniors who have had more experience. This has limited the number of sophomores in many sports, but there are some sophomore athletes who can compete with seniors in their own game. The main idea in school sports, however, is not to compete with one's classmates, but to represent the school in competitions.

Sophomore athletes have as much spirit as the veterans. Many long hours of exercise and practice are spent by sophomores in preparation for sporting events. Since they are sophomores, they must work the hardest because they must be ready for the time when they will have to lead their teams to victory.

Rules

One sophomore complaint is that high school is so strict. Perhaps it seems that way because it is a hard adjustment after summer. In reality, the rules governing discipline in high school are not more stringent; they are just different.

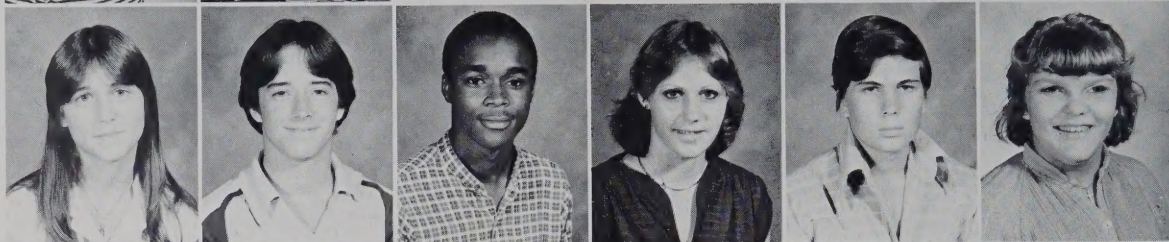

In high school, a student is more responsible for his actions. This poses a problem for some students and lands them in trouble. Thus, they tend to think the rules are stricter. Fortunately, students soon adapt to the new way of life and fit right in.

Chris, I missed your comments in English when you were in Divers Ed! Our class was so-o-o quiet!! Even though we know you a long time, I never cease to be amazed at the things you come up with. Hope you have a great summer! Maybe I'll see ya sometime when I come out of the country! Love Cheryl Keenan

Fitting In

Learning the ropes isn't always as easy as sophomores may think. Entering a new school is likely to cause some apprehensive moments for them. Overcoming their fears is essential but sometimes difficult, so those first few weeks can be hard ones.

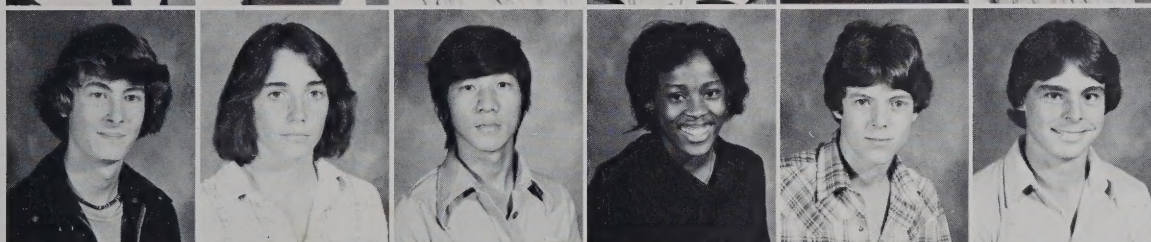

Exercising patience helps the sophomore through the beginning of his high school years. Then he finds his place and begins to fit in nicely. From that point on, it is smooth sailing to graduation.

Learning Is Fun

Education is much more than just a student-teacher relationship at Kellam. Though the core of learning is in the classroom, there are many ways that one can enhance his education.

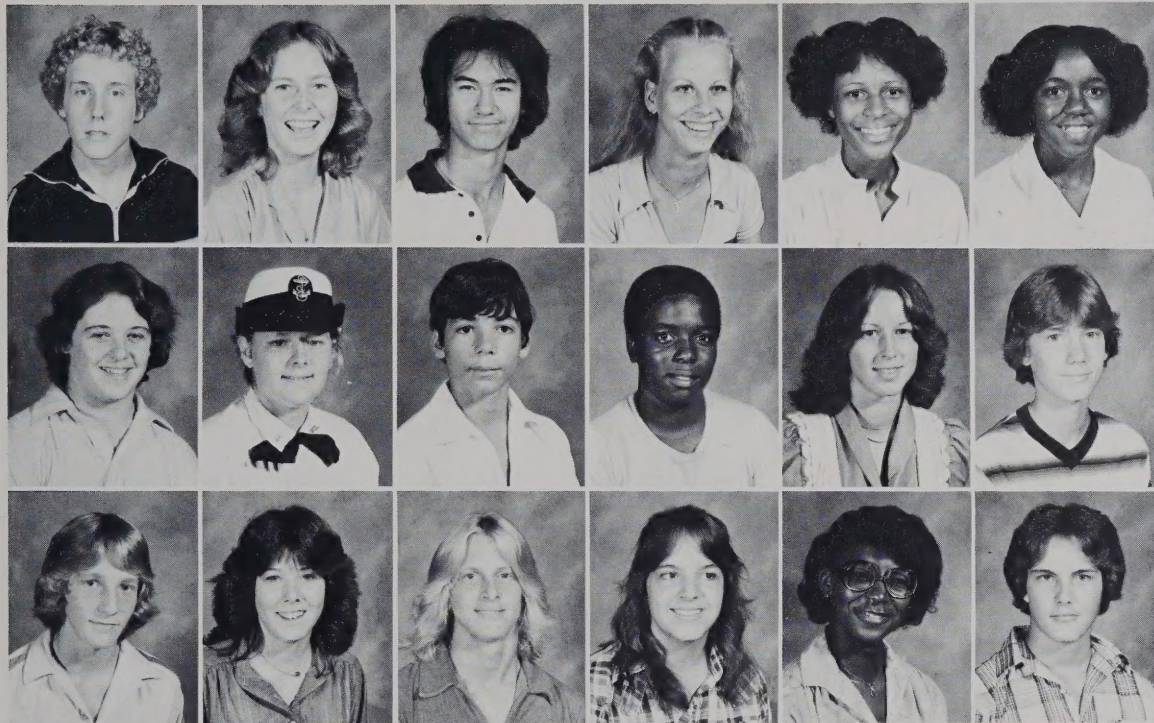

Many students are willing to help other students with their subjects. NHS sponsors a tutoring service, a student-to-student program, through which juniors and seniors share their knowledge with those who ask for help.

Working and sharing with others is a great way to learn.

In Class

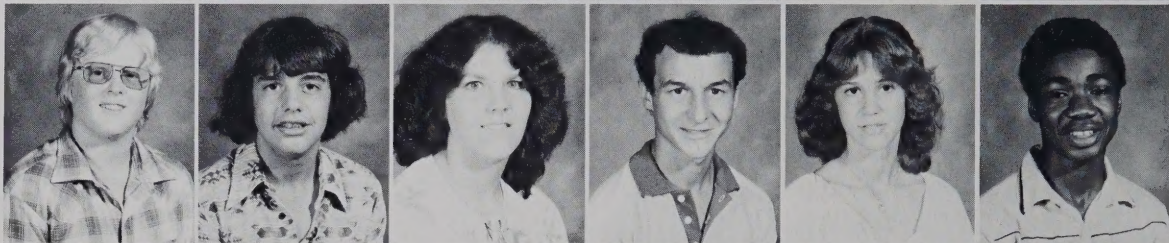

For sophomores, 10th grade is the year of their first laboratory science, Biology. Individual lab partners is a big step from just class lectures. For many, math is a change in that adding and subtracting give way to theorems and postulates. In another direction, 10th grade is the last year that sophomores ever have to worry about gym suits - a welcomed change for many.

The most important class for most sophomores, however, is Driver's Ed. Completion of this course is one of the highlights of a 10th grader's year. It seems to make all other classes endurable.

Being A Part

For many sophomores, just being a student is not enough. They yearn to be more involved in the school. Some achieve this by actively participating in the clubs. They find their niches in the ROTC, Band, Chorus, Drama Club, DECA, AIASA, and many of the other clubs. Sophomores contribute their talents to these organizations and the school profits from them.

Whether the students find places as leaders or as supporting members, no club at Kellam is complete minus sophomores.

Plan Ahead

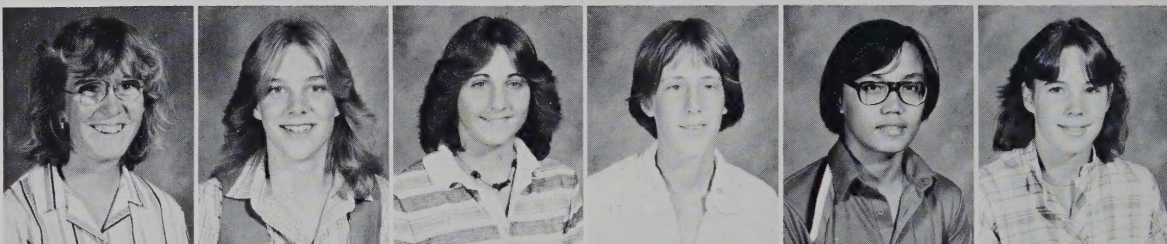

With his entrance into high school, a sophomore should begin to consider his future. He may want to go on to college or enter some type of vocational training and the sooner he begins to explore his options, the better off he will be.

Many places around Kellam contain information that would be helpful to the sophomore. Either the Guidance Office or the Library can provide him with guides for his future. He should take advantage of both and start preparing for the future.

Rising Class

As they heave a sigh of relief at the end of their sophomore year, the rising juniors fail to think of the plight facing them; however, it has happened before and it is happening now. Kellam's juniors are stuck in the middle.

Being in the middle is similar to being in limbo. Attention is placed on sophomores, who are adjusting to their new environment, and on seniors, who are the ruling class of the school.

Juniors aren't satisfied being middle class; they're on the rise.

Ring Time

What is the most significant part of a student's junior year? What one thing does every junior wait for with anticipation? Why do so many students stay for eleven years? A genuine Kellam High School ring is the reason.

First of all, a class ring is a status symbol, not a mere piece of jewelry. Before receiving rings, juniors are paired with sophomores, for there is no way to tell them apart. Once juniors have rings, however, they can be labeled "upperclassmen."

Stephanie Boon turns Bonnie Katz's ring for good luck.

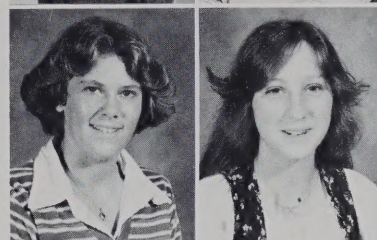

Two juniors order their rings from the Ring man.

Place at the Top

Juniors are very competitive. They excel in contests pitting them against their elders, the seniors. In the Junior-Senior Basketball Game, juniors give the seniors a run for their money, often coming out the winners. They are a generous group, especially when the other two classes are involved. They won the links for a nickel contest at Homecoming.

Juniors like to be winners and are ready to take their places at the top.

School dances, football games, and club meetings are attended by most of Kellam's students, but juniors view them in a new light at the beginning of the year.

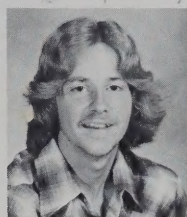

Not permitted to drive to school during their sophomore year, most juniors use this new privilege to their advantage. Their cars fill up the parking lots each morning and make life easier for these middle classmen. It's a great feeling to have a car at last!

Degree of Mastery

During the junior year in high school, a student should begin planning for his future, and many juniors do just that.

Some begin attending Vo-Tech as well as Kellam in order to qualify for jobs requiring a technical skill. Courses dealing with the various vocational skills are offered; most are taught over a period of two years in order to ensure the highest degree of mastery.

Vo-Tech is one way a junior can prepare for the future.

Smooth Sailing

Kellam's complex system of workings requires the joint efforts of several organizations to make it run smoothly. One of the largest contributors is the Junior Class. Class officers see that projects are run in an orderly fashion.

Juniors work in the main office, the counselor's office, the library, and the clinic; they help teachers prepare special displays and projects.

Juniors are largely responsible for keeping Kellam running like clockwork.

Test Time

After 10 years of school, most juniors feel that they have taken every standardized test in the book. But after only a few weeks of school, the unsuspecting juniors are hit with the college boards.

To prepare juniors for these tests, Kellam offers the PSAT, or Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test, which gives an indication of how a student will do on the SAT. Consisting of two sections, one on English and one on math, the PSAT is considered to be a most difficult test. Students who do exceptionally well qualify themselves for National Merit Awards.

Most high school students take the SAT in May of their junior year. This test, unlike the PSAT, has 6 parts: 2 sections on math, 2 on English, and another section on either math or English, where students are tested on their general knowledge of the English language.

College boards examinations may cause headaches for students, but they're an effective way for colleges to judge prospective students and should be taken seriously.

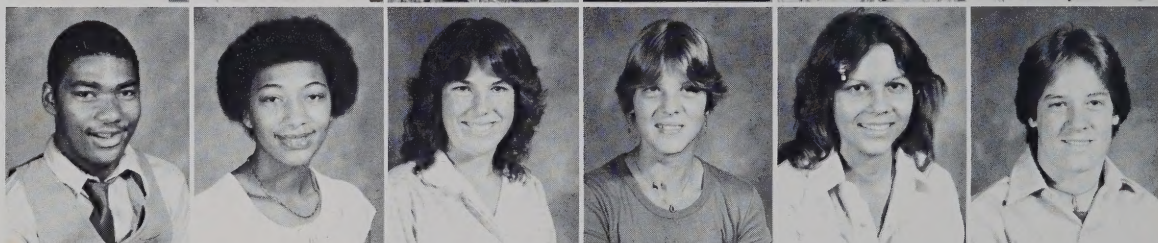

Mrs. Bright explains test instructions to Wade Bell.

Cooperate

One of the things which makes learning at Kellam easier is the cooperation between faculty and students. There is a unique relationship at Kellam which allows students to freely discuss problems with counselors, teachers, and principals. Mr. Themides has an open door policy with all students, which is appreciated by many.

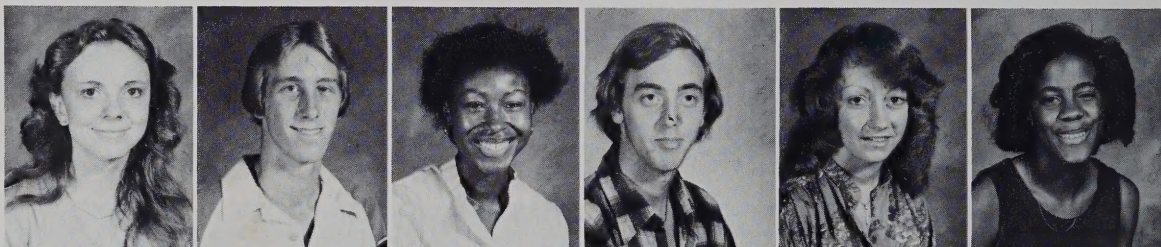

Students cooperate among themselves, also. Senior - junior relationships are commonplace at Kellam. Being together for two years forms strong bonds between these classes, allowing them to work together better.

By cooperating among themselves this year, next year's seniors and juniors will have the necessary experience to carry on a fine tradition of cooperation at Kellam.

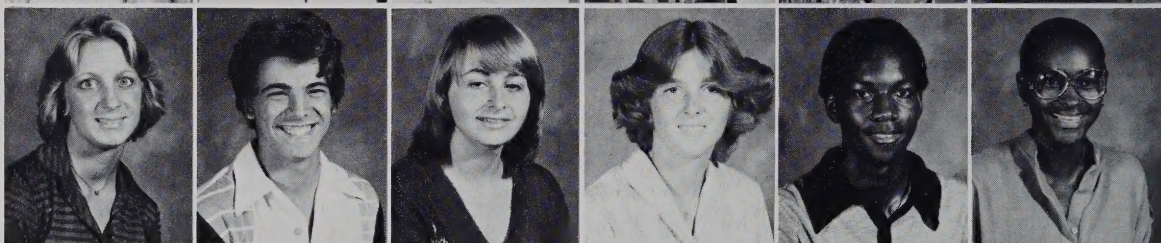

Brian Whitehurst takes advantage of Mr. Themides' open door policy.

Mr. Wicks explains some class notes to Helen Smith.

Class of '80 Revue

Long ago when the Class of '80 was being created, the creator decided to have a special group of students attend Kellam High School. The Special Group is, of course, the Senior Class. From the start, they have been tops in everything.

In their sophomore year, they had a very successful Crystal Ball. Then, to show that they were really on the move, they raised almost $600 over the summer. In their junior year, they won first place in the Homecoming Parade with their float, which was based on two Broadway plays, The Wiz and Don Quixote. They also beat the senior class in the Junior-Senior Basketball Game. This victory served as a great inspiration to this sensational group of students. The main event of their junior year, however, was not the basketball game; it was the Junior Ring Dance. The dance, which was to everyone's liking, was also a terrific money-maker for the class, and these funds helped to get this year's class off to a great start.

Fill In The Blanks

The SAT's are the first step in the process of applying for college. Once the test scores are in, seniors begin filling out college applications. Of course, the applications vary; some require a personal history while others ask only for basic information. Most colleges, however, request an application fee which can be anywhere from $10 to $25. After the application has been completed and mailed, the long wait begins. For those seniors who apply to colleges with rolling attendances, the wait is often just a month; for others, however, it is usually spring before they hear of their acceptances or rejections.

For most seniors, the decision about college is one of the hardest ones they ever make. It is no wonder that much of their last year in high school is devoted to the persuing of numerous college catalogs and the filling out of important applications.

Penniless

Seniors are plagued with costs of every kind. On the top of the money list are fees for college boards, followed by checks for college applications. Then, the hard-earned money goes for announcements, diploma covers, thank-you notes, cap and gowns, and prom expenses. These costs add up, and soon wallets everywhere are drained.

Exasperated by the hopelessness of the situation, seniors can often be heard crying out plaintively, "Hey, Brother, can you spare a dime?"

Never Chile

Hailing from Chile, Maria Sanchez is the only Foreign Exchange Student that Kellam is sponsoring this year. Maria arrived in America last August and is expected to return to her homeland in July. While she is here, Maria is living with Trudy Reh, who has taken four years of Spanish. Maria has made many friends in her short stay in Virginia Beach and is enjoying her classes here at Kellam. We are all happy to have Maria with us.

Maria Sanchez's smile reflects the good times she has had at Kellam.

Super Seniors

Every year seniors select the Superlatives. This coveted honor indicates being well thought of by one's peers.

Sixteen special people are noted for their personalities, looks, intellects, and talents. There are many outstanding seniors, but these 16 pairs are Super Seniors.

No matter which titles are bestowed upon them, these individuals will always have fond memories of being Kellam's Super Seniors.

The Forum

The Senior Senate is a hard-working coalition that holds bi-monthly meetings to plan activities, such as the Senior Prom, and to finance them. Members sold pom-poms at the beginning of the year and flowers at Christmas for this purpose.

The Senior Class does not keep all of the money for itself; the group plans on buying a gift of appreciation for the school at the end of the year.

Senior Staff

There are 5 seniors working frantically to make yearbook deadlines. Editor Lee Wilson is the organizer, a writer, typist, and designer. Pam Anderson is the major typist and has great skill with the keys. Debby Tirey can name any face that is unknown to others. Randy Rentner, the writer laureate, has the ability to write a book on any subject. Derek Rex is a Jack of All Trades. He does layouts, artboard, and is Master of his ABC's.

Lee Wilson, Randy Rentner, and Derek Rex discuss layout procedures during a staff meeting.

Pam Anderson listens to Debby Tirey's instructions.

A look at the future.

Final Day

June 15, 1980 — Graduation Day — twelve long years of anticipation have finally come to an end. This is the day when the seniors of Kellam High leave to begin a new life. They are no longer kids or children, for they are graduating from childhood as well as from high school.

During this time of parting and fare-wells, each student must leave Kellam and some of his acquaintances to discover the greater things which life has to offer.

No play can be produced successfully without the behind-the-scenes work of the stagehands. They tend to many of the details which make the play run smoothly. At Kellam, the stagehands are the active students who belong to the many clubs and organizations. They provide services and activities for the school and the community and play a big part in making Kellam an outstanding high school.

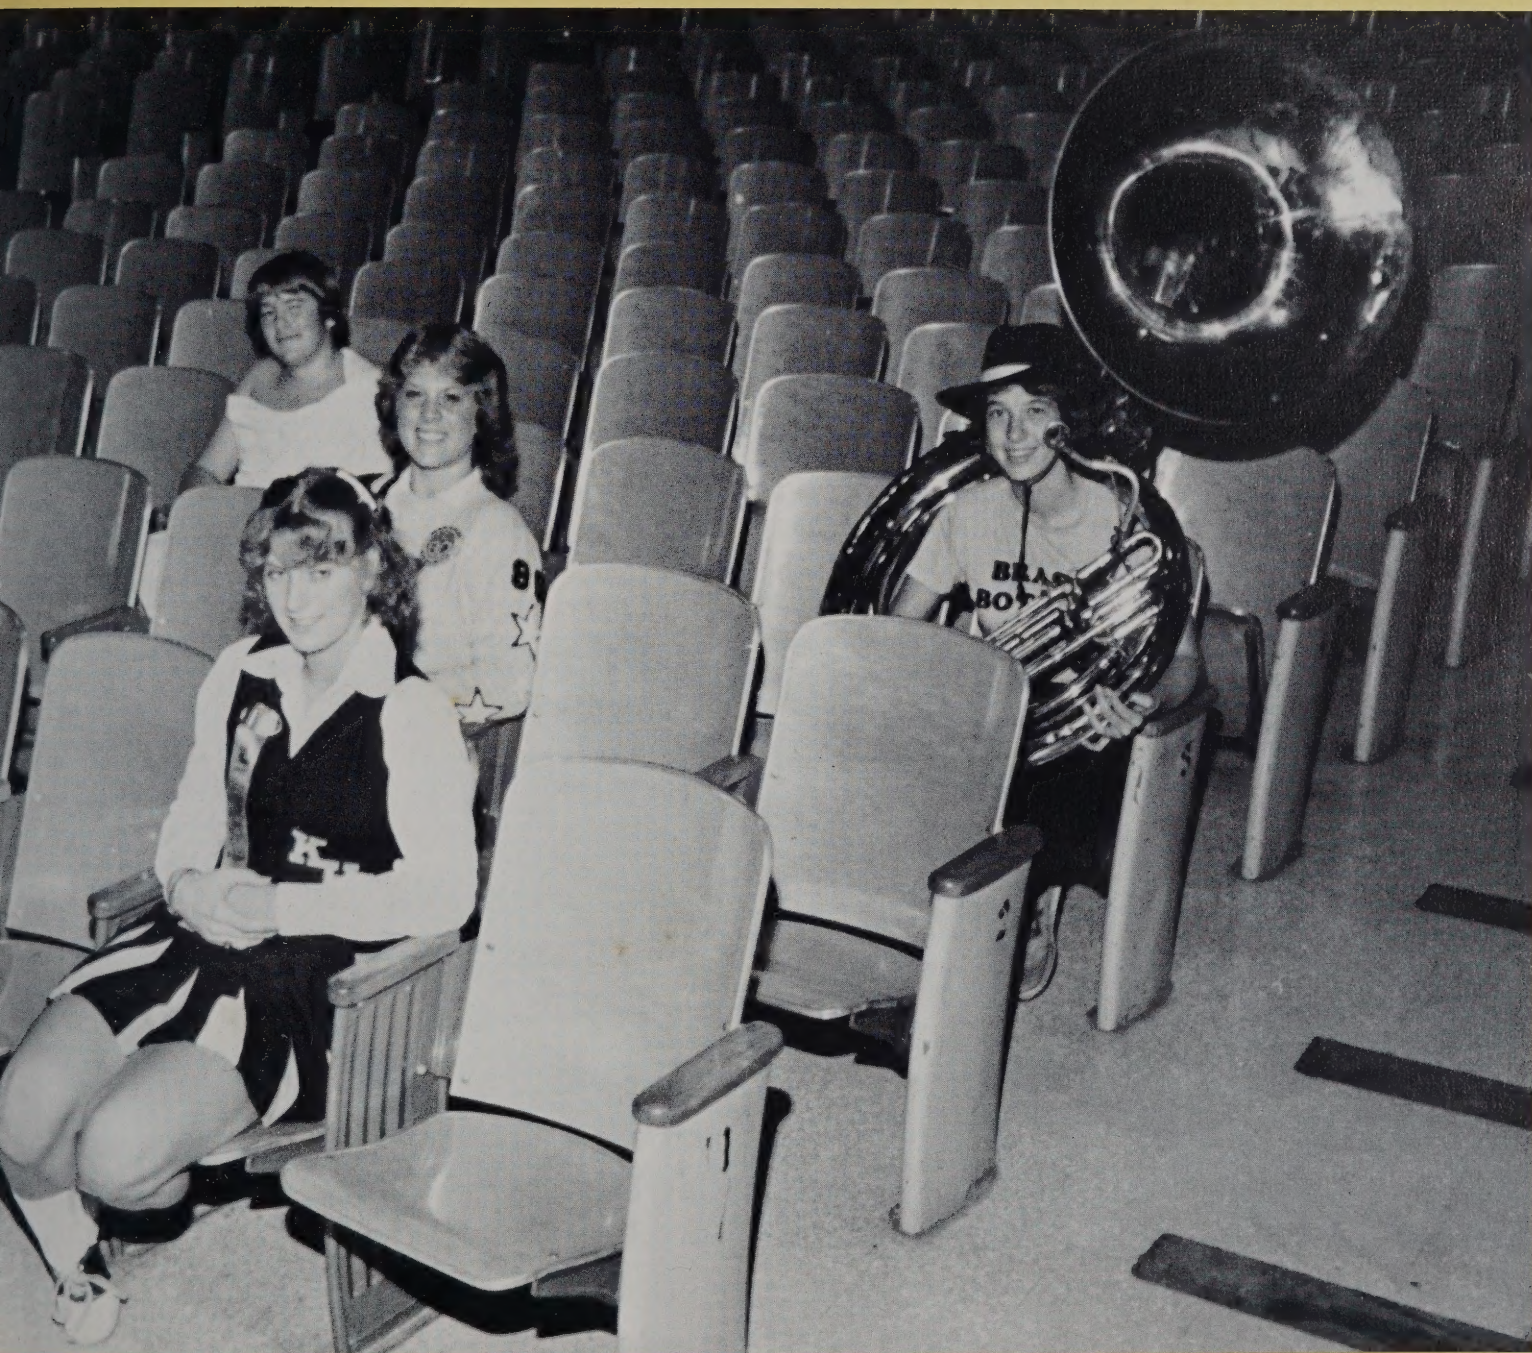

There seems to be no limit to the services performed by the clubs for the school. They provide tutoring for students, conduct leadership workshops, clean chalkboards for the teachers, provide orientation for new students, and initiate many projects to boost school spirit. One group of stagehands redecorated the teachers' workroom, and another group helped the school year get off to a smooth start by placing yellow K's bearing teachers' names on their respective doors. Services such as these help both students and teachers and make Kellam a better place in which to learn.

The stagehands are also actively involved outside the confines of the school campus. In fact, club participation in the community is an aspect of school life on which Kellam prides itself. Clubs enthusiastically sponsor blood drives, fund-raising contests for the Heart Fund and the Cancer Society, and collections for the United Way and the Joy Fund. At Thanksgiving, food is collected for needy families; at Christmas, toys are gathered for the young ones in the community. Throughout the year, various groups visit orphanages and homes for the aged, bringing cheer and warmth into the lives of many. Through his involvement in such projects, the Kellam stagehand learns to care deeply about the people in his community.

Although there is no way to truly measure the good that is done by the Kellam stagehands, there is no doubt that they have major roles in the putting together of the perfect school.

THE STAGEHANDS

Stagehands like Brenda Niedwiedz, Rhonda Voelker, Derek Rex, and Jacquie Thompson make Kellam a better place to be.

Clubs With Clout

Composed of students who are sincerely interested in making their school the best in the city, the Student Cooperative Association is an active and important organization at Kellam. Although official meetings are only held twice a month, the SCA members are involved with their school on a daily, year-round basis. In fact, before school even begins, SCA members conduct tours of the school for incoming sophomores and transfer students. Anxious to make the new Kellam students feel welcome, the SCA also presents the "Mr. Sophomore Show" during an orientation assembly. At that time, they acquaint the sophomores with the many clubs at Kellam and inspire them to become involved, active Knights.

As the year progresses, the SCA sponsors several major projects. They conducted the United Way campaign in the fall and exceeded their goal this year. They also promote Homecoming, beginning with a Spirit Week for the whole school and culminating in the Homecoming Dance.

Hope Haven is a beneficiary of the good work the SCA does. At both Thanksgiving and Christmas, the members provide these children with food, clothing, toys, and games. They visit the orphanage at Christmas and help these young people any way they can.

The Student Cooperative Association is representative of the enthusiastic spirit found in all Kellam activities.

Approving and suggesting — these are the key activities of the Inner Club Council. This group of students, the presidents and vice presidents of Kellam's many clubs, is the final sounding board for all the school's clubs. When a particular organization plans a project, they take their idea to the ICC for approval. Many times, the ICC will suggest ways to carry out this proposed project and help the club make its plans. All club projects which are set up to be carried out in school must first be approved by the ICC.

This year the ICC placed a large activity board, listing all the activities around school on a monthly basis, near the regular clubs' activities board. They also placed a similar board in the main office for teachers. It helps the teachers to know at a glance when report cards and progress reports are due.

The ICC works quietly and effectively in its efforts to help keep the clubs of Kellam organized and running smoothly.

The contributions of the ICC and S.C.A. would be difficult to really measure; however, one thing is certain — Kellam is a much better school because of the hard work and time invested by these two clubs.

Meeting of the Minds

Every spring at Kellam, a select group of students are given a chance to join the National Honor Society. As the name suggests, it is indeed an honor to be chosen.

Before being invited to join this elite group, students must prove their worth to the faculty. All NHS members are selected by the teachers. Members have a good grade-point-average and are involved in other aspects of school and community life.

Once they are in the club, NHS members become more active than ever. They enjoy attending cultural events such as plays and operas.

Members of Kellam's chapter of the NHS perform many services for the school and its student body. Once a week, the NHS, along with the help of Mr. Worrell, holds a Math Workshop. This study seminar is open to all students who need help in math. The NHS also sponsors a tutoring service for students who need help in any subject.

Another project of the club is the selection of the Citizen of the Month, voted on at the beginning of every month. NHS members sometimes find it difficult to keep the secret for 3 weeks, and the news inadvertently leaks out. Activities of each Citizen are displayed in the Auditorium showcase.

The National Honor Society is an active group, composed of quick and ready minds that are always working for Kellam.

While on the subject of great minds, no one can overlook those special students who sorely need more space to vent their creativity. The Literary Art Club of Kellam provides these extra-talented students with chances to have their masterpieces published.

Sponsored by Mr. Dorosz, the Literary Art Club works on two publications throughout the year: the Literary Art Magazine and the Literary Art Club Calendar.

In the Literary Art Magazine are short stories, poems, essays, and artwork by Kellam students.

To help raise money for their award-winning magazine, Literary Art Club members sell calendars. These calendars not only feature artwork by students but also the dates of teachers' birthdays.

A worldly-minded group, the International Relations Club is a fairly new club at Kellam. This club is concerned with the actions and affairs of the countries around the globe.

International Relations keeps its members aware of the daily consequences of political actions at home and abroad. Although this club was formed only two years ago, it is held in high regard for its accomplishments in mock international meetings.

Mrs. Rowan, the club sponsor, made sure that the group attended the mock United Nations General Assemblies and Security Council meetings. At the competition held at Old Dominion University this year, International Relations represented the United States.

The club members spent the better parts of their summers at car washes, trying to raise money so that they could attend the mock United Nations General Assembly which is being held at Georgetown University this year.

The International Relations Club has brought honor and recognition to Kellam in the past two years — a fact that none of the great minds mind!

Parrling and Beckering

French Christmas spirit is displayed by Mlle. Parr.

Kellam's German Club always has a year of German-made fun.

For Homecoming the club entered its version of "Knights From Another World." Their car, which represented the castle of Valhalla, the German heaven for heroic Knights, won a first place.

Following tradition, the club concludes every business meeting with German folk dancing, and nobody is better qualified to teach club members new dances than the club's new sponsor, Mr. Becker.

During Christmas, the German Club keeps up with tradition by singing Christmas carols in German to area German-speaking families. In the spring of the year, another annual event arrives for the busy group. The Virginia State German Convention, a weekend-long event, always provides the club with its high point of the year.

Kellam's French Club likes to remain busy. This constant involvement produces a full schedule which enables the French Club to come into contact with many other people and organizations.

French food-tasting parties are always being planned. The members prepare French food in the Home Ec kitchens and enjoy taking advantage of neighboring restaurants, such as La Crepe.

Watching French movies is another favorite past time of this club. Several theaters in this area regularly provide a variety of French films.

Under the choral directions of the club's sponsor, Miss Frieda Parr, the French Club visits a senior citizens' home every December to do some bilingual Christmas caroling. These visits are enjoyed not only by the club members, but also by the other generation.

The German Club's heaven floats by.

Latin Lives; Spanish Dances

Latina vivit? Yes, even in today's modernistic society remnants of a once proud and mighty race thrive in the halls of Kellam. With an increase of interest in Latin, the Latin Club has maintained a standard of excellence unique throughout Kellam. Even though the club was split in half by the arrival of a new school, it has held its own here at Kellam.

Once again, the Latin Club won second place for their Homecoming Parade Float. This year at the Virginia State Latin Convention in Roanoke, Kellam's Latin Club brought back three awards. This was the best showing Kellam has ever had while attending this annual convention.

This year's club has a new sponsor, Miss Judith Brennan. Under the leadership of Miss Brennan and the club's new president, Derek Rex, the club has managed to excel in the field of classical life far beyond early expectations.

Also excelling in the field of foreign languages is the Spanish Club.

Dancing, castanets, singing, and Paella are some of the ingredients which make up the Spanish Club at Kellam.

Each year, these active Spanish enthusiasts entertain their fellow students and the people of the community with their dancing and singing. Each spring, the club members dance at the Azalea Festival in Norfolk. Some of the dancers use castanets as they perform the folk dances of Spain. In the fall, the Spanish Club dancers performed the "Jota Aragonesa" at the Norfolk Naval Base's Hispanic Day Celebration, and they entertained at the Neptune Festival. The members are also willing to delight their fellow students by performing on various occasions at school.

When not performing, the Spanish Club members are involved in money-making projects such as car washes and bake sales. They also take part in several Spanish and Mexican parties where they bring the ingredients necessary for creating a Spanish dinner.

The Latin and Spanish Clubs maintain high standards of excellence; and the clubs, credits to the foreign language program, bring honors to the school and to the community. Thanks to these clubs, Latin and Spanish students are given a chance to further their education. Students not only have an opportunity to make good use of their language skills outside the classroom, but they also have a chance to grow and have fun.

Spanish Club members practice a new dance routine before a major performance at the Neptune Festival.

DeBook or DeBate

Working at the check-out desk and shelving books are two of the Library Club's duties. The members of this club devote at least one of their free periods to working in the library.

An organized group, the Library Club meets once a month. They help the school librarians plan and produce several yearly affairs, including the Book Fair and National Library Week. Kellam's Book Fair encourages students to purchase both paperback and hardback books. The National Library Week provides Kellam students with information of every kind about the library and how it operates.

Overall, the Library Club provides indispensable services for Kellam by taking good care of its library and making sure that others will be able to make good use of its valuable resources.

Among those who take advantage of the library's valuable resources are the debators. Through hard work and determination, these club members have established a terrific record of wins. In fact, opposing teams tremble with fear when they consider going up against Kellam's Debate Team.

Dressed in their best suits, Kellam's debators dominate the Tidewater Debate League Tournaments and always bring home at least one first place trophy. Besides the TDL tournaments, the Debate Team also participates in the Lord Botetourte Tournament in Danville, Virginia. This year the team of Rob Brotzman and Doug Dion captured a first place team trophy, and Doug Dion also won a first place speaker trophy.

The Kellam Debate Team is proof that it is not quantity that always counts — sometimes it quality. And quality is one word that fits this club perfectly.

Keys to Success

When certain little children receive letters from Santa Claus at Christmas, it's quite possible that they're reading the well-written words of a Kellam Key Club member. This activity is a Key Club project which brings smiles to many young faces throughout the area. Each year, the Key men collect the North Pole letters from the local Post Offices and then devote many hours to composing letters from Old Saint Nick. It is a very thoughtful gesture on their part and means a great deal to certain members of our community.

Further demonstrating a fondness for the young, the Key Club members make visits to the Kings Daughters Children's Hospital during the year.

The Key Club puts together a decorated car every Homecoming and takes a fun trip to Busch Gardens each spring.

The Key Club is basically an active club, dedicated to serving others.

As sponsor of some very successful community-oriented projects, the Keyettes have made a name for themselves in the city of Virginia Beach. Each year, they pull at the heart strings of animal lovers in the school with their SPCA drive. They collect a commendable amount of money for this worthwhile organization.

Continuing with the animal theme, the Keyettes "Send a Mouse to College" in behalf of the American Cancer Society, and it is generally a huge success.

In the spring, the Keyettes provide a Health Exhibit at Pembroke Mall for the junior high school students. They display important information about smoking and diseases.

Other Keyette projects which relate to the community are the United Way and Hope Haven canned goods drive. These drives take place around Thanksgiving. There is also a contest held for Sophomore, Junior, and Senior Personality. The proceeds from the contest go to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Some Keyette activities pertain to the school only. For instance, each fall, students are aided in their search for their classes by the yellow K's which are taped on each classroom door. These K's indicate which teacher is behind which door and are great aids during the first week of school confusion.

The 1980 Kellam Keyettes are truthfully a club to be proud of.

To the teachers' delight, Debby Tirey and Laura Van Horne wash boards for another Keyette project.

Rhonda Voelker talks to Brenda Niedzwiedz as she waits to give blood.

People Helping People

Every other week the Junior Civitan Club meets in Room 23, their home at Kellam High. It is necessary to meet this often because there is so much going on in Civitan. They are and always have been an extremely active club, involved in the school and community. Their dedication and hard work have paid off; they have been the recipients of numerous awards on the district and state levels.

Perhaps Junior Civitan's greatest contribution to the school and community is the blood drive which they sponsor. They hold one in the fall and in the spring. A great deal of preparation goes into these blood drives, and their great success each year attests to the efficiency and effort of the club members.

Always working for others, the Civitan members devote many hours to projects designed to benefit the Association of Retarded Citizens. They hold a Mr. Legs contest, have a T-shirt sale, sell fruitcakes, and conduct a See-Saw-a-thon at Pembroke Mall.

This year's Civitan group planted dune grass at 60th Street at the beach to help stop beach erosion. This back-breaking project reflects the Civitan concern for its community.

Also totally involved in important community projects is the Trinity Tri-Hi-Y. This small club proves that it is quality that counts and not quantity.

The Trinity members sponsor a KOPE (Klean Our Polluted Environment) in March and April. They make monthly visits to the Shore Drive Convalescent Home and bring a little sunshine into the lives of the Senior Citizens living there. Such visits are also part of a project connected with Virginia Beach General Hospital.

Trinity members support the young members of our community too. In the spring, they host an Easter Egg hunt for underprivileged children at Red Wing Park.

Trinity members are very busy around school. As part of a desire to make students aware of the environment, they put plants in many of the classrooms and care for them carefully. They please Kellam's teachers by washing their car windshields and making the old coupe a bit more attractive.

A fun and different type of fund raiser is the Trinity sponsored "Ugly Truck" contest. The winner, of course, is the teacher who has the ugliest car or truck.

The special people in Trinity give a lot to Kellam.

Chris-
In my little yearbook, you are down as "funniest" because of your comments in English. I wish you could have stayed in for the last six weeks. Now I have to sit by Danny. If you are in one of my classes next year, be sure to bring life-savers & cents - I get hungry by 10:00. In case you're not, here's a word of advice: "Try to overlook the shells in your omelet, & eat it with joy." Good luck, Chris. Jenny Singleberry

A Look at the Future

One hundred members strong, the Future Homemakers of America work throughout the year to establish community involvement and to develop domestic skills.

The FHA sponsors many successful projects which benefit needy people; among these are a Christmas clothes and canned food drive and the "Adopt a Grandparent" program. These programs require a great deal of organization and time, and the efforts of all FHA members are greatly appreciated by the many people whom the club aids.

Several school activities also keep FHA members busy. Homecoming was a busy time for the club as it was creating an award-winning Homecoming float named Mork from Ork. A spring banquet, a spring picnic, and a volleyball tournament occupied members as well as highlighted the school year.

Although the Executive Council of the club meets once a month after school, regular club meetings are held monthly during class. Such meetings are concerned with planning for the State FHA Conference and the City-Wide Gong Show held every year.

Most FHA members readily admit that they belong to a fun and worthwhile organization.

To bring unity to the business program and to provide an opportunity for students to put into practice those skills and knowledge learned in the individual classes are the goals of the Future Business Leaders of America. This co-curricular vocational organization has long been a leader among the regional FBLA chapters.

Kellam's chapter of the Future Business Leaders of America conducts projects under a five-point activity program: social, service, skills and knowledge, leadership and promotion, and financial.

Social activities for the FBLA include visits to the March of Dimes' Mansion of Terror at Halloween and the Chrysler Museum. Attending the annual FBLA regional picnic is another one of the club's social outings.

FBLA service projects include serving dinner for policemen and firemen at Thanksgiving and Christmas and providing food for needy families. FBLA members also do typing for the March of Dimes Mothers' March and serve refreshments at the PTA Open House.

Incorporating skills and knowledge into the overall program, the Kellam club sponsors competitive events for all business students during FBLA week. They also hold spelling and math contests in the classrooms. In the past, as many as 17 FBLA members have competed in regional events and 3 on the state level.

The fourth point of the FBLA program is leadership and promotion. Members involved in this phase of the club's activities are responsible for putting goodies in the teachers' boxes on holidays and providing breakfast for the faculty at Christmas.

The last activity in the 5-point program for FBLA concerns the financial end of the club. Throughout the year, the members sell doughnuts, hold car washes, sell Tupperware and raise funds through the sale of jewelry.

This strong and active organization has helped to improve the overall business program and has served Kellam well.

Both the Future Business Leaders of America and the Future Homemakers of America clubs are instrumental in the development of more well-rounded students at Kellam. The students who are fortunate enough to belong to these organizations will gain from their experiences and benefit others in the future.

Industrial Diamonds

A thoroughly professional club, Kellam's DECA club tries to enhance a student's knowledge of vocational and retail services and their bearing on the students. As a member of the Distributive Educational Clubs of America, Kellam's DECA works with the students in school, the different services in the community, and various vocations in the business world. Through membership in DECA, students are able to put into practice the knowledge that they have gained from Distributive Education class.

The diamond is the national insignia of DECA. The four points of the diamond represent the purposes of the club; Civic Consciousness, Social Intelligence, Vocational Understanding, and Leadership Development.

DECA provides several service projects for its members to become involved in. During the summer, DECA redecorated the teachers' lounge, adding a carpet, curtains, pictures, and carpeting. Members also raise money for charities during the year, often donating as much as $100.00 to a worthy cause such as Muscular Dystrophy. Other activities include carolling at Christmas, setting up booths at area junior high schools to provide information on Distributive Education, and taking part in various competitions around the country.

The ultimate goal of DECA, represented by a wrapped package in the middle of the diamond, is A JOB WELL DONE. There is no doubt that this goal has been reached by the DECA club at Kellam.

Kellam's representative in the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America is a group of twenty energetic young men and women. The VICA club actively participates throughout the year in District, State, and National VICA. Members generally excel in these competitions by displaying their knowledge in contests on Spelling, Public Speaking, Current Events, and Job Interviews.

The VICA club is quite interested in developing good leadership qualities in its members. Several members represent Kellam each year at the VICA Leadership School. There they participate in such leadership activities as Public Speaking, Safety, Club Financing, and Employer-Employee Relations. Good training in this field also comes through attendance at district rallies and through maintaining a job in the career in which they intended to go.

The VICA members are all involved in trade, industrial, or technical education courses and are vocationally and occupationally oriented. Whether it's Cosmetology, Meat Cutting, Broadcasting, or Dog Grooming that interests the VICA member, he will always work in a cooperative way with the entire group to develop leadership abilities through participation in worthwhile educational, vocational, civic, recreational, and social activities.

Fields to be Proud of

Designed to develop leadership and industrial abilities in students, the American Industrial Arts Student Association is better known as AIASA.

The Kellam AIASA represents Kellam in local, state, and national conferences. The club is an asset to the overall educational program and represents Kellam well.

A club that mixes fun with practical knowledge for the future is Medical Careers. The members gain this knowledge and experience by working daily in the clinic.

Taking tours of area hospitals is one activity of the Medical Careers Club. Attendance at hospital CPR courses is also part of the club's agenda.

To these devoted people, Medical Careers are exciting and rewarding fields of study.

A most coveted possession in high school is the black and gold Monogram jacket, which displays one's accomplishments in athletics. This jacket is proudly worn by the active members of Kellam's Monogram Club.

When one applies for admission to the Monogram Club after receiving a varsity letter, one must participate in the infamous Monogram initiation. Initiates wear Monogram signs and are subjected to embarrassing tasks.

Once the fun of initiation is over, the Monogram Club settles down to its main objective, promoting sports in the high school arena.

Lisa Moore, Trudy Reh, and Joscelyn Marcal enjoy club meetings in the clinic.

In the Know

At the end of every school year, many students stand in long lines, waiting for the book all of their friends will autograph. It is in this book that the memories of high school live forever. This coveted book is The Challenger, which is published by the Yearbook staff.

Staff members spend many long hours every day after school to get the yearbook published on time. This year, the Yearbook staff actually stayed ahead of its deadlines and sent in more than the required number of pages on each deadline. This is a rare feat that comes only from enthusiasm and organization.

Lee Wilson, this year's Challenger editor, has kept the whole show organized. Her yearbook experience has guided the rest of the staff, all rookies, through a successful year. Her dedication is unsurpassed.

The younger members of the staff, John Keller and Dave Warren, show promise of continuing the calibre of the '80 Challenger next year.

Pam Anderson, Randy Rentner, Derek Rex, and Debby Tirey are the seniors who have taken on the challenge of the Challenger. They have devoted much time to the menial tasks as well as to the more responsible work on the book.

The 1980 Challenger staff has proven beyond a doubt that it is quality that counts and not quantity. They have put out an exceptional book which thoroughly covers life at Kellam.

Kellam's award-winning newspaper, the Roundtable, has undergone a major facelift this year. Under the supervision of Mrs. Blankenship, the tabloid's size and print style have been altered, making it more readable and improving its appearance.

The Journalism II class is the newspaper staff. They receive "on the job training" by learning the basic journalism concepts and then utilizing them in the production of the Roundtable. Each student is responsible for a page in each issue, which allows the students to gain first-hand experience in all aspects of the newspaper.

Student and faculty subscriptions are sold by staff members during September, and the paper can also be purchased on the day of publication. The paper's circulation has reached an all-time high.

The Roundtable provides an important service for everyone at Kellam. It is a timely account of all events at Kellam with special features such as editorials and letters to the editor.

Kellam students are extremely fortunate to have such an informative and prestigious newspaper to "keep them in the know."

Be Someone Special

A half dozen rifles are thrown in the air. A platoon of uniformed men and women march in unison. Though it may seem like it, this isn't a military maneuver performed on a foreign battlefield. Rather it is the NJROTC practicing their moves on Kellam's back parking lot.

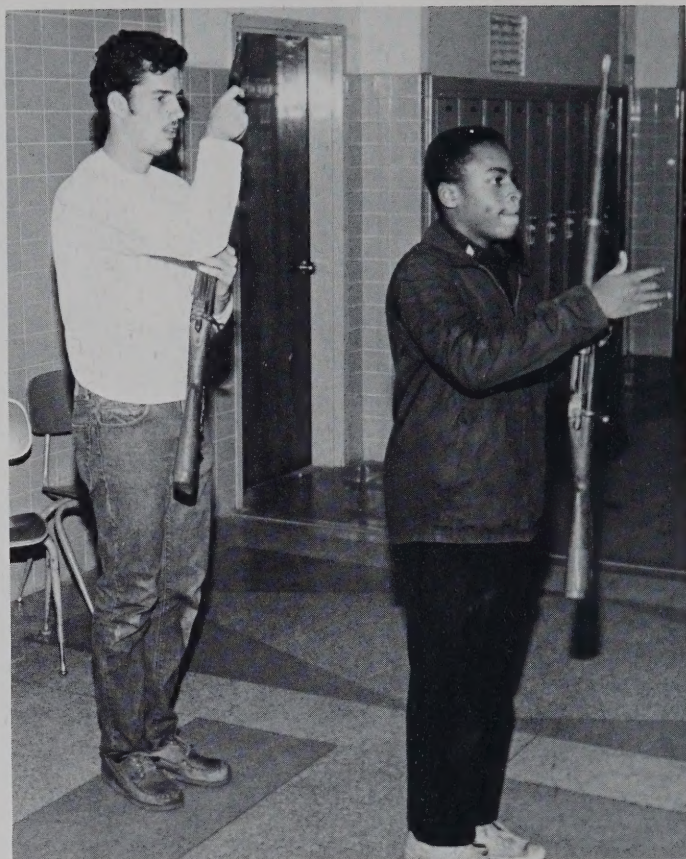

What, you may ask, is the reason for the existence of NJROTC? First, the members find that they have a stronger sense of patriotism after participating for only a few weeks. Second, there is more to the unit than just a mass of clean-cut young men and women studying Naval organization, leadership, science and other related subjects. They participate in competitions which test their ability to work as a coordinated group. Third, the program promotes habits of orderliness and precision and develops respect for constituted authority. Perhaps one of the most important aspects of NJROTC for a high school student is the fact that it develops a high degree of personal honor, self-reliance, individual discipline, and leadership qualities.

In addition to the superb drill teams, Kellam has a rifle team that is hard to beat anywhere in the state.

The NJROTC is largely responsible for cleaning up the stadium after the football games. However, they do not always play a behind the scenes role at sporting events.

Where Everything's Uniform

In NJROTC, the cadets have a wide range of extra-curricular activities away from their "home port." They make trips to see active ships and aviation squadrons of the Atlantic Fleet. They also make visits to the Naval Academy and to the nation's capitol, Washington, D.C. This year they included trips to Yorktown, Jamestown, and Williamsburg as part of their activities.

Those students who take the Naval Science courses are preparing themselves to be someone special in the future.

Also preparing for the future are the Science Club members. Future scientists of all fields pursue their interests and develop their scientific procedures under the direction of the club's sponsor, Mr. Hecker.

The Science Club often turns out some of the best individual science projects that Kellam enters into the Science Fair. Many of these scientifically-minded students enter science contests, engineering examinations, and bridge-building competitions at Old Dominion University.

The highlight of the year, however, is attendance at the annual meeting of the Virginia Junior Academy of Science. After Mr. Hecker and the students spend two or three days at this statewide convention, they become even more intrigued by the wonders of science.

One of the wonders of science, mathematics, has been called the Queen of Sciences because it is involved in all branches of science and is universally employed by everyone.

Math involves a logical and intuitive mind, and not everyone enjoys laboring over the precise and orderly problems. Certainly, not everyone enjoys the more abstract side of calculus and algebra either. But at Kellam there are some people so enthusiastic about math that they have joined the Math Club, which is sponsored by Mr. Worrell.

Among the projects of this enthusiastic club is a field trip to Old Dominion University for a Computer-Science Program. The club also sponsors various speakers on math-related topics. These soon-to-be accountants and statisticians are busily preparing for their future through these extra-curricular activities.

The March of the Knight Brigade

Because 119 members have devoted at least 195 days of practice to Kellam's band, the Big Black Marching Machine has logged approximately 23,205 man hours toward the development of Kellam's award-winning band.

The band grabbed second place at the Tidewater Marching Festival, as well as third at the Old Dominion University Marching Band Festival and a fourth place award at the East Carolina University Marching Band Festival. At Regional Competition in the fall, 21 Kellam students won seats in the Regional Band. Among them was Lee Wilson, drum major, who was awarded first chair for snare drums, bells, and tympani.

The band looked forward to the same successes throughout the year in their many competitions. Mr. Correll, the band director, and the three drum majors, Lee Wilson, Cindy Moranha, and Gary Moore, deserve some of the credit for the band's tremendous successes because of their hard work and dedication.

With the much-needed help of the Kellam Band Parents, the band raises money by operating the concession stands during every home sporting event. This organization also held a TV Raffle to raise funds for the band during the football season.

The band members also raise money for the group by selling doughnuts and candy bars.

With the eager help of the student body of Kellam, the band raises enough money to keep them on their feet and looking sharp.

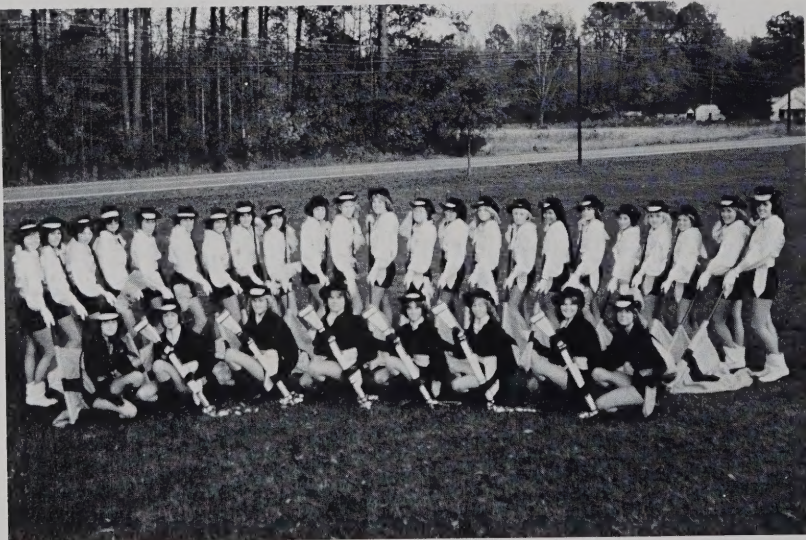

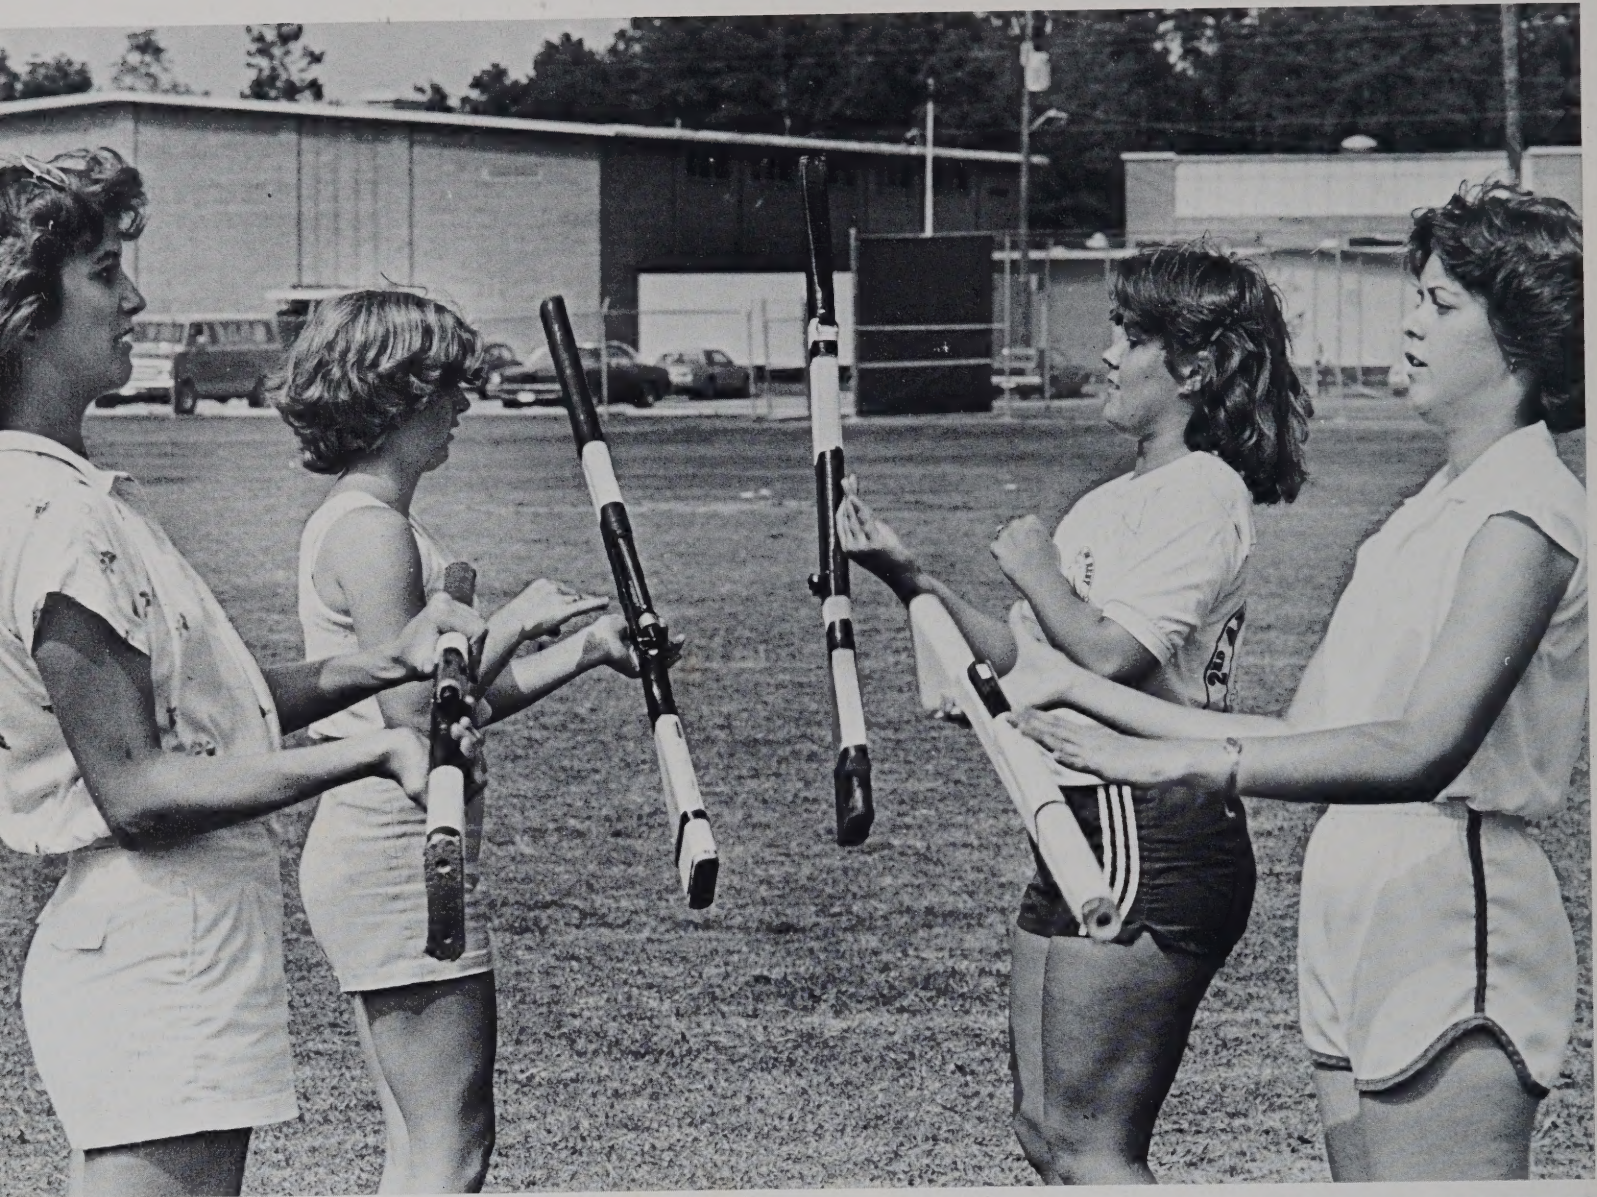

Since spirit is not always at its peak, the band contributes greatly to raise school morale. They play spirited songs at the football games, helping to keep the blood flowing when the going gets rough. They are also there to add to the delight and excitement when the game is going well.

The students and faculty of Kellam owe the Big Black Marching Machine a lot of thanks because of their spirit and dedication and are proud to be associated with this group.

Todd Brown, Larry Glass, Jeff Sharp, Mark Wade, and Junior Lingansin await the drum major's next command.

Timing and concentration are of the utmost importance for Nancy Morgan, Denise Leslie, Jullie Wesley, and Sue Andrew, members of Kellam's Drill Team.

Banners and Flags

Marching to the tune of the Kellam drummer, the Knight's Drill Team with flags waving in the breeze is an impressive sight. Throughout the year, the team takes part in several marching competitions, and they always represent Kellam in an outstanding way.

The highlights of the Drill Team activities, however, are considered by many to be their performances at Kellam football games. These colorful and well-executed shows are a source of pride for the Kellam students and faculty.

When not on the field, the Drill Team members are always busy with money-making projects. During the year, they sell spirit ribbons, pies, candy, and doughnuts. Their projects are always successful because the members are enthusiastically involved.

Visions in black and gold, the Kellam Drill Team is the embodiment of school spirit.

Unique in their dedication to Kellam and its students, the Cheerleaders of 1979-1980 are outstanding young women. There seems to be no end to the work the cheerleaders are willing to do.

A typical week for Kellam cheerleaders involves many hours on the school grounds. Most afternoons are devoted to rigorous practices where they perfect their cheers.

Most Cheerleaders projects during the year are geared toward promoting school spirit. For example, during all sports seasons, colorful banners cover the walls of the school. They remind students of the weekly games and urge them to support the teams. These banners are removed by the cheerleaders on Friday after school and often reappear at the game that afternoon or evening. Students and other Kellam fans appreciate the time and effort that go into the making of these spirit signs.

The Cheerleaders are always quick to show their appreciation of others. They salute the faculty during the year, recognizing them for their hard work and dedication. They decorate locker rooms and provide refreshments for the teams on various occasions. They are extremely supportive of all of Kellam's athletes, and they make a superb link between the Super Stars of Kellam and their Fans.

August mornings provide a perfect opportunity for the Marching Band and Drill Team to rehearse their routines.

They Sing Their Song For You

Kellam's Music Department includes four fine choruses. The Choruses range from Girls' and Mixed Choruses to the finer Concert and Madrigal groups.

The Girls' and Mixed Choruses are the basic courses serving as stepping stones to the more advanced Concert Chorus and Madrigals. Concert and Madrigals, the prides of Kellam's choral department, perform concerts at various gatherings, shopping centers, and junior high schools. The most elite group, the Madrigals, are invited to private meetings and club gatherings such as Kiwanis Club, Christian Women's Club, and the Avon Ladies Convention. The Madrigals have had an exceptional year. They performed at Madison Jazz/Show Choir Festival and placed first in their division. The Madrigals have entertained many with their excellent style and superb singing.

At school, the choruses perform annual concerts for students and parents. Their fall musical was a great success. At Christmas, the entire choral department serenaded the school with a Christmas program. In March, they produced "Knights on Broadway" and in the spring another program was presented for music lovers.

Nearly one fourth of the students participating in Chorus auditioned for regional chorus. Ranging from Bass II to Soprano I, twenty-five talented students made regional chorus. Selection in state tryouts enabled these gifted students to participate in All-State Chorus, a great honor.

At the end of December, Mrs. Moscatello, who had directed the Kellam Choral Department, left Kellam and moved with her family to Denver. She was replaced by Mrs. Gibson, who has continued to extract the same high quality performance from her students.

Kellam is proud of its Choral Department and grateful for the many hours of good entertainment which it has provided.

Kellam is especially proud of Hebron Malaki and Greg Short, the only Kellam students to make the very selective All-State Chorus.

Going Great Gunns

From the halls of biological science to the steps of the Kellam stage is just a short trip if you happen to be Dan Gunn, this year's new Drama coach. With an impressive list of acting and directing credits to his name, Mr. Gunn has taken over Drama Club and Thespian activities with ease.

First among the successful Drama Club activities this year was the presentation of A Fifties Rock and Roll Revue featuring music from Grease. The play was an outstanding success, bringing in over $2200. for the club. The production was a result of the talents of the Drama members and chorus students. It was spearheaded by Mr. Gunn and Mrs. Moscatello who, in turn, were assisted by Mr. Don Nultumeier, the Choral Director at Princess Anne Junior High School. The play's choreography was taped for showing at Princess Anne.

Also on the Drama Club agenda was a One Act Play presented for the school in February and a 3 Act Shakespearean presentation in late April.

It would be very difficult for most people to be as active and involved as Kellam's actors are. They spend many hours at practice throughout the year, and they are truly one of the hardest working groups at Kellam.

Indeed, Kellam is very lucky to have so much good entertainment provided by Mr. Gunn and his Drama Club.

For the Sake Of Others

Serving the community has always been a primary concern of Kellam's organizations. With the advantage of having over fifteen hundred "helpers" in the student body, the success of the clubs has been outstanding.

The Keyettes' SPCA drive yielded nearly one thousand dollars, with Miss Canada's classes donating over one hundred dollars. The Keyettes also sponsored a successful fund-raising campaign for the Joy Fund.

The SCA's Hope Haven Campaign brought canned food and clothing to those who needed it. The SCA also works in conjunction with the United Way in order to help others.

Blood is always a precious commodity, and Junior Civitan's annual Blood Drive collected a record number of pints of blood this year. Junior Civitan members set up donating stations in the gym and then find people in the school who are willing to give part of themselves for the sake of others.

Other clubs in the school also work for the benefit of the community. The FHA sponsors not only an adopt-a-grandparent program but also clothing and canned food drives at Christmas time. The FBLA's Christmas and Thanksgiving dinners are given for all the policemen and firemen who must work on the holidays.

Clubs service the community's needs in other ways, too. Entertainment is always provided for different groups by the foreign language clubs. These clubs are capable of singing and dancing their way into other people's hearts in their own special way.

The Kellam clubs exist for the sake of others and many people benefit from their efforts.

max oder Chris,
Du bist ein sehr sehr und albern dudel! Ich glaube, dass du bist O.K. ! Durch den Sommer, wir wollen each other hoffentlich. Du hast Spass in BDR, O.K. ! Du willst !!

Well, Chris, I can't think of any more German to write so I'll switch to English for awhile anyway.

So, here I'm sorry about not being able to go to some of the concerts. Once I have instilled confidence into my parents, I'll be going all over the place + we can go cruising just about anywhere +
I'll drive to a bunch of the concerts even if by that time you already could.

Have fun in Germany even though you'll probably miss a bunch of really good concerts. Rush will probably make a surprise appearance but I'll be sure to take pictures + get you a program!
I hope you can get plenty of Mountain Dew while you're overseas! Ha, you might even get arrested for selling drugs, "what,
I didn't know selling this white dust is illegal!" Well, I'll be waiting for you to come back so we can go to concerts, etc...

Später ein gut Freund, Mike
Eckman

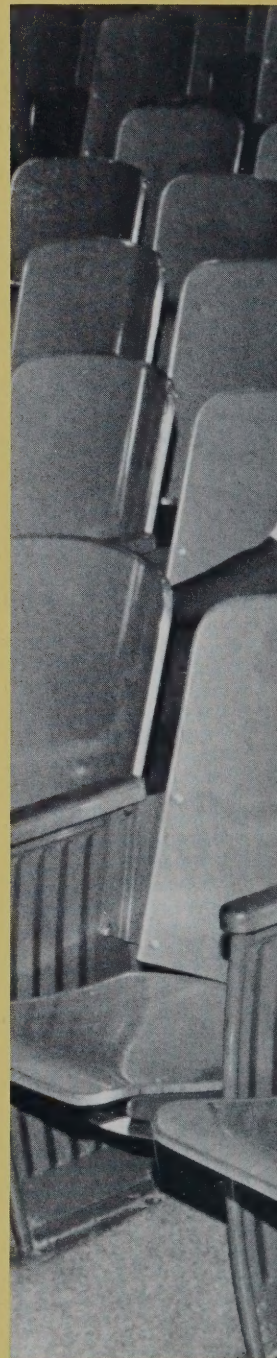

As in any theatrical presentation, a few members of the cast stand out from all the rest. At Kellam, these stars are usually found on the track, on the football field, in the gym, and on the tennis courts, golf course, and baseball diamond. They are, of course, Kellam's outstanding athletes.

The athletic program at Kellam is as perfect as a student could wish. The sports offered span a wide area, and the stars created by those sports are many. All a student really has to do is pick his season. In the fall, city championships are sought by the football players, the hockey players, the cross country runners, and the female tennis players. As winter approaches, the basketball team, wrestling team, and gymnasts come on the scene. They are followed in the spring by the golfers, baseball and softball players, track stars, and male tennis enthusiasts. Students are not confined to participating in just one sport, and many students make a name for themselves through two or more sports.

The student body, as a whole, has a great deal of respect for Kellam's athletes. They show this through their faithful attendance at all sporting events.
Outstanding performances are recapped on morning announcements, and a bulletin board is maintained outside the main office for posting newspaper clippings and photographs of Kellam athletes. The many trophies are on display in the foyer of the school. It is through these athletic young men and women that Kellam is known statewide, and the student body is appreciative of this fact.

The honors which have been brought to Kellam through its outstanding athletes are numerous. It is easy to understand why they are the "stars" of the Kellam production.

A New Coach A New Approach

Throughout the years, Kellam football has suffered a series of ups and down. In its early days, wins were a hard thing to come by. Finally, the tide turned and Kellam became a formidable opponent. They won 3 district championships in 4 years and became the first district team to ever boast a 5-0 record. It is difficult, however, to stay on top, and this year the Knights found themselves embroiled in some very tough battles. Many will agree, however, that the 1979 team was better than the records show.

For Jim Garrett, the Knight's new football coach, this past season was a rebuilding time for Kellam. The team members were, for the most part, inexperienced. Coach Garrett approached the problem with one goal — to get these new players the experience they need for the years ahead. He had 13 sophomores this year, and 5 of them were starters. Fortunately for future Kellam football, there will be 24 returning players in 1980. The experience they gained this year should prove invaluable to next year's team.

Among the senior players this year is Eugene Rivera, who received the Most Valuable Player award. Larry Miller distinguished himself by being named to the First Team, All Beach District.

Kellam football has had its ups and downs, but some things never change. In the eyes of many, Kellam will always be Number 1.

Fifth row: Danny Kerby, Dudley Nesbitt, Ronnie Fleming, Tommy Bellamy, John Jones, Stan Hill, Donald Miller, Rodney Jordan, Timmy Miller, James Bowman, David Flanigan.

A Stick In Time Saves Nine

Carrying on the Kellam tradition of hard work, team effort, and good sportsmanship, the Lady Knights performed extremely well on the field this fall. They finished with an overall record of 7 wins, 4 losses, and 1 tie. The tie, the highlight of the season, was with the defending state champion, Kempsville, on October 11. The Lady Knights were leading contenders for the Beach district title.

The strength of this year's team was due, in part, to the fact that half of the team members were returning players. Among the outstanding veterans was Glenda Rose, who received the Most Valuable Player award. Cathy Brandt, the outstanding senior goalie, received the Most Dependable award along with a full athletic scholarship to Eastern Kentucky University. Robin Kinzel, a junior, was the leading scorer for the team. These experienced players were valuable assets to the team.

Fortunately for Kellam hockey in the future, there are 9 team members who will be returning to play next fall. Among those returning are Stephanie Williams, Sheryl More, Kelley Campbell, Audrey Turner, Cindy Ringer, and Robin Kinzel.

There is little doubt that the winning streak begun by this year's team will continue in 1980, especially with the guidance and enthusiasm of the returning 9.

Hi Guy! I'm really glad that I got to know you in Elementary school, but even more glad that I got to know you so well in Algebra last year. I really wish that we could have had some classes together, but at least you were in 6th Bell English for a few weeks. You're a great friend with a terrific personality sense of humor. You've also got a cool car! Later can of luck in all you do!! and have a nice summer.

Miles To Go

Covering the 3.1 mile course at Mt. Trashmore is an easy task for the 5 members of this year's Cross Country Team. The 3 seniors, 1 junior, and 1 sophomore who make up the team are some of the finest runners in the city.

Coach Johnny Morris has never coached Cross Country before this year, but he is looking forward to next year's team already. Because he was not named as the coach until September, there really wasn't a chance to pull the usual 10 or 11 team members together. However, the 5 runners who are on the team have been excellent representatives of Kellam. The team, as a whole, is slightly better than last year's team, and each runner has had the satisfaction of seeing his times improve.

Among the 5 runners, the only one to make it to the Regionals was Anthony Moore. He qualified 11th in the District meet and is destined to make an even better showing as part of next year's team. Anthony was voted Most Valuable Member of this year's team.

Forward Motion

Who are your favorite athletic stars? If you like the names of Chris Everett-Lloyd, Bjorn Borg, or Ilie Nastase then maybe the tennis teams at Kellam are your cup of tea.

Tennis is more than just hitting a bright yellow ball over a net. It demands speed and coordination that only a choice few have. In addition, many, many hours of practice are necessary to assure winning performances.

Girls' tennis moved into a fall sports slot this year, much to the delight of those involved. The Indian summer afternoons that are so common in the Tidewater area provided excellent playing conditions.

These Kellam stars show a remarkable skill on the courts. Always in forward motion, these young athletes are members of two of the best tennis teams in Virginia Beach.

Through the Hoop

For years and years, Basketball at Kellam was hidden in the shadows of other sports like football and baseball. This year, however, Basketball emerged into the limelight and provided Kellam fans with hours of excitement.

Under the guidance of a new coach, Joey Caruthers, the Kellam Basketball Team fought its way successfully into the second round of the District tournament, one of the best showings by a Kellam team in the history of the school.

The Boys' Basketball Team finished the season with a 6-6 record in the district and an 8-13 overall record. Their most glowing moment came in their 62-61 victory over Princess Anne in the first round of the District tournament. The winning shot came in the last 16 seconds of the game when Daryl Christian, an outstanding senior player, hit a jump shot. Kellam went ahead for the first time in the game and held their 1 point lead until the final buzzer. The victory was particularly stunning because the Princess Anne team was the regular-season champion and had won its last 12 games.

After the P.A. victory, Kellam took on Cox in another thriller. After a mediocre showing in the first half, the Knights exploded in the second half and lost to the Cox Falcons by only 2 points.

The patient teamwork of Kellam boys, the impressive coaching of first-year Coach Caruthers, and the feverish support of the Kellam fans were the major factors which made for such a successful season.

Diane Scarcelli and Glenda Rose are teamwork personified.

In basketball, as in the game of life, Glenda Rose learns to accept the disappointments as well as the triumphs.

Dot's Dolls

A good defensive team — that's what Dot Durant's girls' Basketball Team is all about. This major strength is what took the Kellam dolls into the District playoffs and what gave them an 8-4 record in the District for the season.

Composed of six seniors, three juniors, and three sophomores, this year's team was very strong on the backboard. Led by starters Glenda Rose, Rosita Padilla, Audrey Turner, Diane Scarcelli, and Teresa Ringer, the girls managed to give the Kellam fans many evenings of exciting games.

Perhaps the best game that the girls played this season was the one in which they defeated Granby. All things coordinated perfectly that night and each player performed well.

Another outstanding game came in the District playoffs when the Lady Knights lost to the Bayside Marlins by six points. At one point in the game, the Kellam girls trailed by twenty points, and their comeback was spectacular as well as exciting. And, as befits a Kellam student, they handled the disappointment of losing with class and dignity.

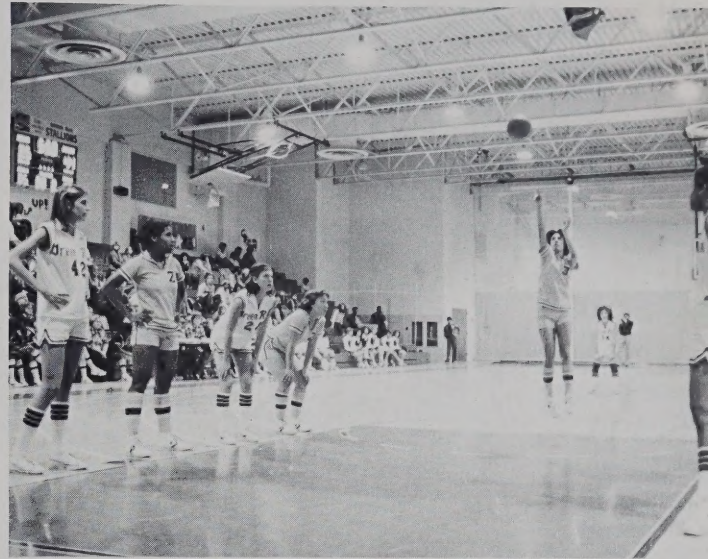

Coach Dot Durant looks forward to another strong and winning team next year. Even though it will be a rebuilding year for the Lady Knights, there will be six talented veterans to lead "Dot's Dolls" to victory.

Teresa Ringer knows her job is to get past her guard and into Knight territory.

For the opposing team, it's bad news when an expert like Rosita Padilla gets to shoot from the foul line.

Mat Men Matter A Lot

When winter arrives and temperatures no longer permit outdoor sports, Kellam High School fans can be found indoors, actively supporting the school's wrestling team. Twice a week these twelve, strong young men participate in matches against district and non-district teams.

The wrestling program at Kellam is above average, and the 1980 team is a good example of this. These competitive grapplers devote many hours each day to hard workouts, which help them to develop strength and total body control. Coach Kevin Michaels, a former wrestling champion, oversees the training and discipline of these mat men. His expertise has brought them to the point where they are considered formidable foes throughout the city.

One outstanding team member this year is Ray Lewis, the 126 pound state champion. He is one good reason that the mat men matter a lot.

No Hurdle Too High

Throughout the country, nothing has gained in popularity faster than running. People of all ages are out jogging on a daily basis and participating in marathons. At Kellam, running has always been popular, and the records of the Kellam track teams over the years are proof of this.

For the boys, there is indoor track as well as outdoor track so that a runner can stay in shape year-round without any trouble. The indoor track meets take place on Saturday mornings at Green Run High School. They begin at 8:00 a.m. and all of the high schools in the city participate at this time.

In indoor track and in outdoor track, there is much more than just running for the competitors. There are many field events such as the high jump, long jump, discus, shot-put, and the hurdles. Most team members take part in a field event or two as well as running events and relays.

Outdoor track meets, which are dual meets with the girls' track team, are held on Wednesday afternoons. There are six meets altogether, three away and three at home.

Kellam track has always been a popular sport. Many honors and titles have been brought home to Kellam by these running stars.

Run-On

Only enthusiasm and the determination to be winners could drive thirty or so young women out to the track when snow is still on the ground. But that's exactly what happens at Kellam each year when the Girls' Track Team forms and begins to practice.

For more than a month, the sprinters, long distance runners, and the field events competitors prepare for the meets which begin in the middle of March. During the competitive part of their season, these avid runners participate in six dual meets.

During the dual meets at home, the boys and girls on the track teams share the responsibility for setting things up. In fact, one of the greatest assets to Kellam track is the willingness to help one another that exists between the boys' and girls' track teams. Competitors throughout the city look forward to the meets at Kellam because they know that things will run smoothly and fairly.

Why some people are willing and able to endure the pain and hardship that goes with becoming outstanding athletes is a question few can really answer. Fortunately for Kellam, however, such people do exist and that's why we have such a winning Girls' Track Team.

Busy on the Beam

Having lost many of last year's team members, the 1979-80 Gymnastics Team has found itself caught up in a building year. The young team, which consists of one senior and seven sophomores, has displayed, however, an ability to compete with the best in the city.

The Gymnastics Team has a busy season with meets twice a week starting in December. Many hours of practice are necessary in order to achieve perfection in any of the various competitive areas.

A Kellam gymnast may be found on the beam or on the uneven parallel bars. A Kellam gymnast may also be seen competing in the floor exercises or in the vaulting events. In some instances, a gymnast may take part in all four competitions. This year, Kellam had two all-around performers, Sherri Meeks and Janine Lowery. In the past, Sherri performed well in the regional meet and missed qualifying for the state finals by one point.

The coordination and discipline required for success in gymnastics eliminates many prospective competitors in no time. Those who persevere, however, find many rewards and much satisfaction in being part of the Gymnastics Team.

Soc It To Them

The Marines have come to Kellam. Well, at least one Marine has come to Kellam. He is Mr. Firnstahl, the new girls' soccer coach. Although he is retired from the service and is teaching at Princess Anne Jr. High, Mr. Firnstahl has drilled his girls to winning perfection.

In preparation for this tough sport where hands can't be used, the girls ran miles, did sprints, and dribbled the ball until they could dribble no more. It all paid off; the Kellam girls had a successful season.

The 11 member team, 3 forwards, 2 links, 3 half-backs, 2 fullbacks, and 1 goalie, made a strong showing throughout the 12 match season. They presented a strong challenge to their toughest opponents, Cox and First Colonial, as they attempted to better their 1979 District standing.

Led by seniors Virginia Raine, Becky Gressley, and Vickie Scherrer, and returning juniors Robin Kinzel and Kathleen Cooney, the 1980 Girls' Soccer Team was one of the best in the city.

Par-Tee Kicks

Just a step ahead of the official start of spring, the Golf team began its matches on March 18th at Red Wing. From that point on, it was steady practice and match after match for the six young men who comprised the Kellam team. From Red Wing to the state tournament at King's Mill was the objective of all six golfers.

Guided by Coach George Owens, a well-known local golfer who has been coaching for 12 years, 4 seniors and 2 sophomores practiced daily until dark. They worked out at Bow Creek and Red Wing golf courses and played their matches there as well.

Greatly aided by John Buckley, a senior team member who shoots in the mid to low 70's, the team scores during the season were ones to be proud of. Even the smallest of teams excels at Kellam.

Also excelling in their season action was the boys' Soccer team. A good team with top quality players, the Kellam soccer men were long on experience. There were many returning players this year and their know-how spurred the team to exciting victories.

Along with ability and experience, superb coaching contributed to the successful year. The 1980 coach, Mr. Edward Garvey, was new to Kellam sports and did an excellent job.

Kellam fans enjoyed many thrilling moments during the boys' soccer season.

Real Swingers

Approximately 18 young ladies battled snow and ice to begin practice for the 1980 Softball season. Such determination coupled with skill and hard work provided an outstanding Kellam Softball Team this year.

Perhaps the weakest spot on the 1980 team was in the pitching area. Teresa Ringer, an all-around junior athlete, filled the position admirably. She was aided in achieving victories by such stand-outs as Terry Dickerson, a strong senior shortstop, and Brenda Strausbaugh, a talented outfielder and hitter. Another valuable asset to this year's team was Jeannie Flagg, a senior known for her strong hitting.

The Girls' Softball Team played 12 games this year, beginning on March 28th with a game against First Colonial. As in the past, their most challenging opponents were the girls from Bayside. And, as might be expected, the game between the two teams was a very exciting one.

The Kellam Girls' Softball Team provided another example of Knight sportsmanship.

There's No Place Like Home

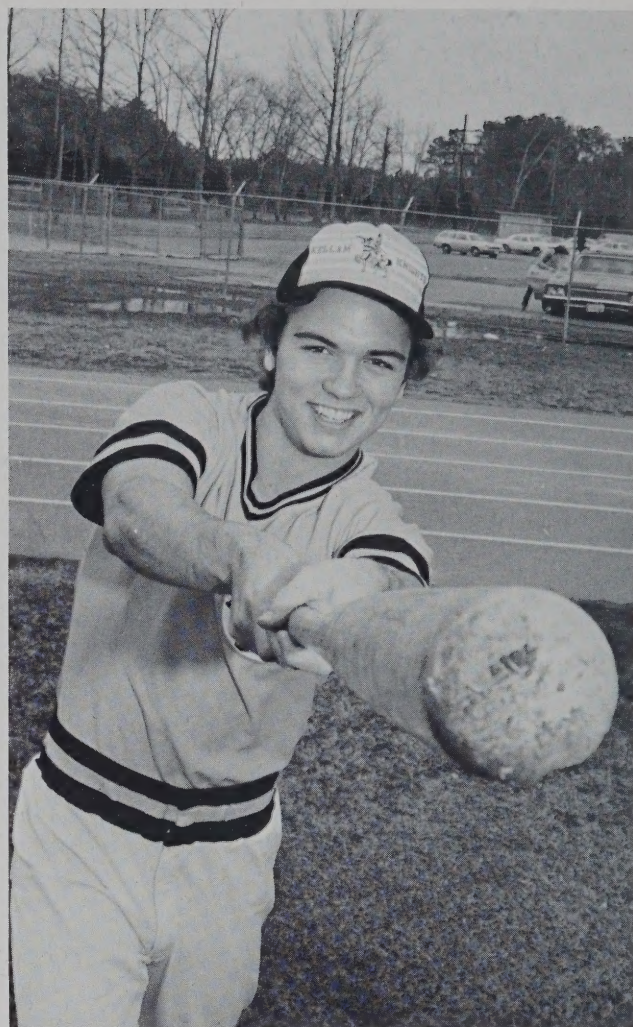

After winning its first district championship and setting a new school record for fifteen games won in the 1979 season, the Kellam Baseball Team has a tough act to follow in the 1980 season. Despite losing nine seniors to graduation and five sophomores to Green Run, Coach Sykes and the team feel that this year's team is very competitive and is in the running for a second Beach District title.

Outstanding returnees include seniors Joey Millis, Bret Harley, Brian Dees, Scott Hughes, Fred Braswell, Jack Siar and Jack Graff as well as juniors Larry Setzer and Chuck Chappelle. Transfer student Brian Fuller and a promising group of sophomores contribute heavily to the Knight's success. The team has welcomed a new assistant coach for the 1980 season, Steve Scarcelli, a former player at Kellam High School.

On Saturday, January 19, 1980, nine baseball team members and Coaches Sykes and Scarcelli attended the Richmond County Baseball Clinic in Rockingham, North Carolina. Saturday was spent listening to lectures and watching demonstrations on various baseball techniques presented by fourteen college baseball coaches. All in all, the Kellamites attended seven sessions which covered all aspects of baseball. They stayed at Holiday Inn Saturday night and returned on Sunday. Coach Sykes said the weekend was "a very worthwhile experience."

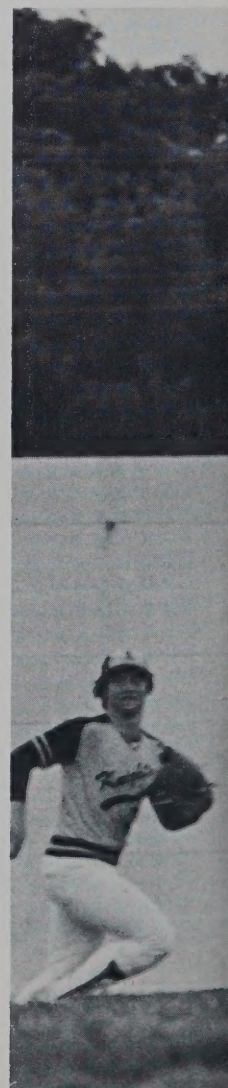

According to Coach Sykes, "This year's team is as good or better than last year's team. Although we do not have the overall team depth that we had last year, we work hard."

Even the finest Broadway plays must come to an end, and so it is with the Kellam production. However, every aspect of life at Kellam hasn't been covered, and so a brief attempt must be made to do just this.

First, a list of cast members and the order of their appearances in the play is invaluable. Better known as the Index, this cast listing makes it easier for the viewer to follow the action.

Then, of course, should come acknowledgement of those fine people who have supported the Kellam cast throughout the year. Their generous contributions by means of Ads have helped to make this production a reality. Much credit must go to the Challenger Business Staff who made all the arrangements with these very fine and necessary patrons of the arts.

Finally, close-ups of Kellam students who reflect the spirit and life at Kellam make an ending that's worth waiting for. There are the Shining Examples, the students who have received special awards throughout the year. There are, also, the students who keep Kellam in step with the fashion trends. One and all, they model the Costumes of the Times.

Then, Strictly Speaking, mention needs to be made of the rules which govern Kellam students. They are an important aspect of the total scene.

Life at Kellam has so many sides and some are just a tiny bit Off the Wall. But, when Nature Calls, Kellam students are there and ready. They can ride, shoot, and surf with the best of them. They can also graduate with the best of them, and that's exactly what some of the Closing Lines of the play are all about.

Kellam students know how to give of themselves to others. They deal in Abstract Terms, focusing on such meaningful concepts of life as friendship and patriotism. They work for one another and for their community and country. Kellam students know that in this life where "all the world's a stage," each must play his part.

School of Radiologic
Technology

The School of Radiologic Technology offers a 24 month educational program consisting of didactic and practical instruction. Enrollment is during the first week of September. There are advanced areas of education in the Radiography profession requiring an addition one year. Courses in chemistry, biology, algebra, geometry and basic math are strongly suggested as preparations for studying Radiologic Technology.

Shining Examples

In every high school, there are students whose personal skills and qualities stand out above all others. These students are more than the run-of-the-mill general activists whose numbers swell every school, for these are the elite of the school. They are the shining examples.

This year's Homecoming Court is just one example of Kellam nobility. Each of these girls excels in physical appearance; they also possess magnetic personalities. According to Eugene Rivera, Senior Class President, each of the Senior attendants deserved to be Homecoming Queen. There was, however, only one winner, and of the five lovely young ladies, Debbie Carroll was chosen, the first Kellam Queen to be chosen by her classmates and not by the football team. Also chosen for the court by the Senior Class were Missy Dudley, Teresa Wood, Michelle Herrle, and Lori Fuller. Junior attendants included Toni Scarcelli and Cindy Ringer, and Sandy Brininger and Stephanie Williams were the Sophomore attendants.

Those students who were chosen to participate in the various summer programs are other examples of Kellam superiority. Kellamites attended Boys' and Girls' States, Governor's School for the Gifted, Leadership Workshop, and various National Science Foundation programs around the country. The knowledge gained while attending these various programs around the country has proven to be very beneficial to these students. Fortunately for Kellam, they are willing to share these experiences for the good of all.

In many fields — beauty, academics and leadership — Kellam students prove they are the cream of the crop. These students are shining examples to the students around them.

Costumes of the Times

Fashion's fickle world leaves many a Kellam student staring blankly in the closet at the beginning of each school day. Styles change as quickly as the weather and keeping up with them is a monumental task.

Particularly disturbing to the stylish female Kellam dresser are the extremes one must go to. Some occasions call for designer jeans while other events require loose, almost baggy pants. If the former is being worn, then high, high heels such as platforms are a must. These generally tend to cause aching feet, so wearers have to change to lower-heeled shoes such as Deck shoes or Flip-Flops.

Jewelry has come into its own this year, especially since gold hit an all-time high on the Common Market. Young ladies at Kellam add the finishing touches to their outfits by donning numerous gold chains. Charms dangle from one or more of these chains; in some instances, three or four charms will adorn the same chain. These necklaces complement the many rings which beautify the hands of these stylish Kellam students.

Both male and female students are caught up in the athletic look. Warm-up suits, jogging shorts, and specialized T-Shirts are essential for the well-dressed look. Ski vests protect wearers from the wind whether on the slopes or off. Many feet parade the halls, snugly encased in Adidas and Nikes. The athletic look assures the wearer of comfort and style.

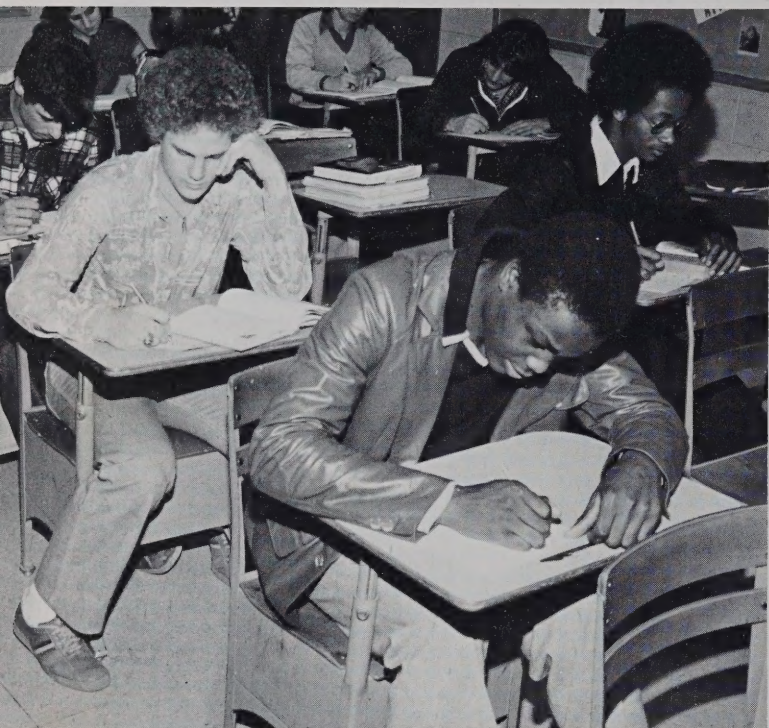

Back on the scene this year is none other than the "Preppie" style. Students favoring this mode of dress wear crew neck sweaters and buttoned-down collar shirts. The Preppie feet are usually firmly placed in some style of loafer.

The ever-popular country look is still prevalent at Kellam. These models of easy living wear overalls, flannel shirts, and jeans. It is a clean, wholesome look which is enjoyed by many students.

Regardless of the style of dress, Kellam students know how to choose clothes that fit their personalities. This tendency to individualize with confidence is what makes the Kellam student body unique.

Daily attendance breeds good work habits in students like Daniel Spence, Randy Smith, John Dudley, and Ken Foreman.

Strictly Speaking

Being a student at Kellam is enjoyable. However, it is not all fun and games. Kellam, like any other school, has a set of rules which is strictly enforced.

The rule most often encountered at Kellam is associated with the highly prized Hall Pass. No one can get past the pair of omniscient eyes stationed at the end of each corridor without the magical piece of paper. Hall passes are given out for a variety of reasons; however, most teachers dole them out sparingly. Since every corner is covered, there is no way for a student to roam the halls without being questioned by someone. This system works quite well for the good of the school.

Then, there's the big T-Tardy. Kellam is really cracking down on late comers and stragglers. Such students tend to disrupt classes with their late entrances, and teachers are determined to have their classes go undisturbed. If a student arrives tardy to a teacher's class 4 times in a six weeks' period, he or she is referred to the office and most often placed in

In-School Suspension.

In-School Suspension at Kellam is affectionately known as the Alcatraz of Virginia Beach. It is here, under the supervision of Mr. Wayne Sykes that many students report to make atonement for their past sins. Once a student has undergone a day of strict discipline in I.S.S., it is unlikely that he or she will try for a repeat performance.

Kellam adheres to the city-wide rule of loss of credit for excessive absences. Any students who misses more than 30 classes in a year course or 15 classes in a semester class automatically fail the course. Although most students never even come close to having 30 absences, the rule is the downfall of some.

There are only a few of the rules which govern the student body at Kellam. Strictly speaking, most students learn the rules well and follow them carefully. That's one of the reasons why Kellam is such a perfect school.

Augustine Smith holds Mr. Dorosz's unique hall pass.

Checking corridor passes is a part of Mrs. Jackson's hall duty.

Mr. Correll's class is interrupted by Jon Dreuitt, who is tardy.

Greg Peterson whirls down the hall with his cap in place.

Off The Wall

So many things go into making up the perfect school that many books would be needed to cite them all. A few of the more unique things, however, need to be mentioned in order to give a complete picture of the Kellam of 1980.

Among the unusual additions to the Kellam campus this year is a colorful mural which covers the outside auditorium wall near the entrance to the chorus room. The gleaming silver knight positioned to ward off the awesome dragon was painted by seniors Doug Carter, Vicki Scheer and Cathy Marcus. Senior Senate members also contributed to the project along with Steve Walls and Blake Burns. This impressive 12' by 12' eyecatcher is definitely one of the more interesting objects d'art around Kellam.

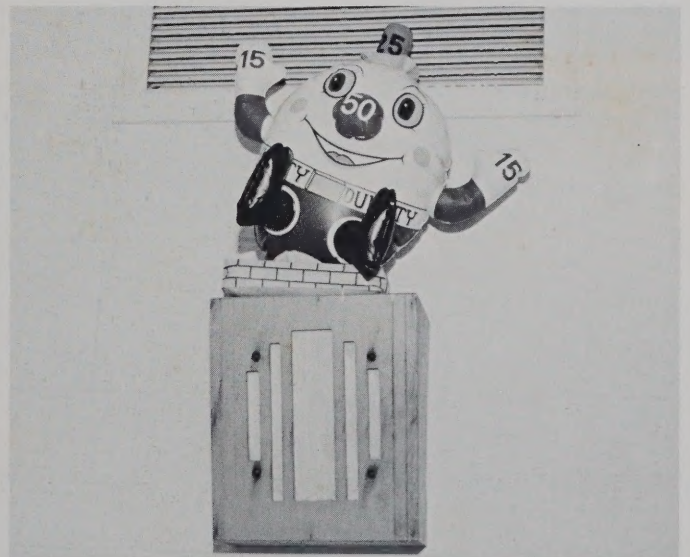

Another unusual feature to be found at Kellam is the method of decoration used in some of the classrooms. For instance, a rather silly looking Humpty Dumpty sits comfortably on the speaker in Room 66. Leaning back against the wall for support, Humpty smiles upon the students who enter the room and soaks up the knowledge right along with them.

Not to be left out of the unusual at Kellam are the many different kinds of students who grace its halls. One might see a young man walking down the hall nonchalantly while a whirley-bird hat rests on his head. Or one might come upon a perfectly sane looking young woman doggedly carrying on a conversation with a wall. There is also every chance in the world that one might come across Santa Claus posing cheerfully outside a classroom window. These are only a few of the many characters who fit in so beautifully at Kellam.

These things, these people — on the wall in some instances and off the wall in others — are a vital part of the overall Kellam look of 1980.

Santa landed outside Room 95 and spread cheer through the Kellam halls.

Humpty Dumpty sat against the wall all through the fall.

Bernie Portafe gives the wall a piece of her mind.

Nature Calls

It's no secret in Virginia Beach that Kellam students consistently score well academically and athletically and work hard to achieve their top ratings. But there's another part of their lives that combines hard work and pleasure. This aspect of their daily routines takes place when school is over and serves to make those involved even more well-rounded people.

To view these Kellam students in their other lives, one has to travel some distance down narrow, winding roads and head for the country. In this land of beautiful fields and dense woods, Kellam students abound.

These students in Kellam country are involved in a variety of activities. Many are avid hunters, who manage to spend a number of weekends a year in pursuit of duck, geese and deer. When they're not sporting a gun, they're likely to be found riding the waves at Sandbridge. Thanks to the wet suit, surfing is a year-round sport and many Kellam students are drawn by the challenge the ocean presents.

Closer to their homes, the Kellam students who live in the country are involved in what some might consider chores. They chop wood for family use and for selling. They farm and care for the cows, pigs, and, in one case, the buffalo. They train horses and ride them for pleasure, but they also meet the responsibilities involved in keeping them healthy. They derive much satisfaction from tending to their four-legged friends.

It's a beautiful life that these lucky Kellam students lead — a life that enable them to be close to nature when it calls.

Closing Lines

There comes a time in the life of every student when he or she must bid adieu to high school and move on to other things. Prior to the final departure, however, seniors must go through many experiences which, in some ways, prepare them for the big time ahead.

Probably the first hurdle to overcome in those final months of high school is deciding what to do next. Seniors devote many hours to examining possible career opportunities and to making decisions about going on to higher education. Many students facing graduation watch the mails closely, hoping for that letter of acceptance from the college of their choice.

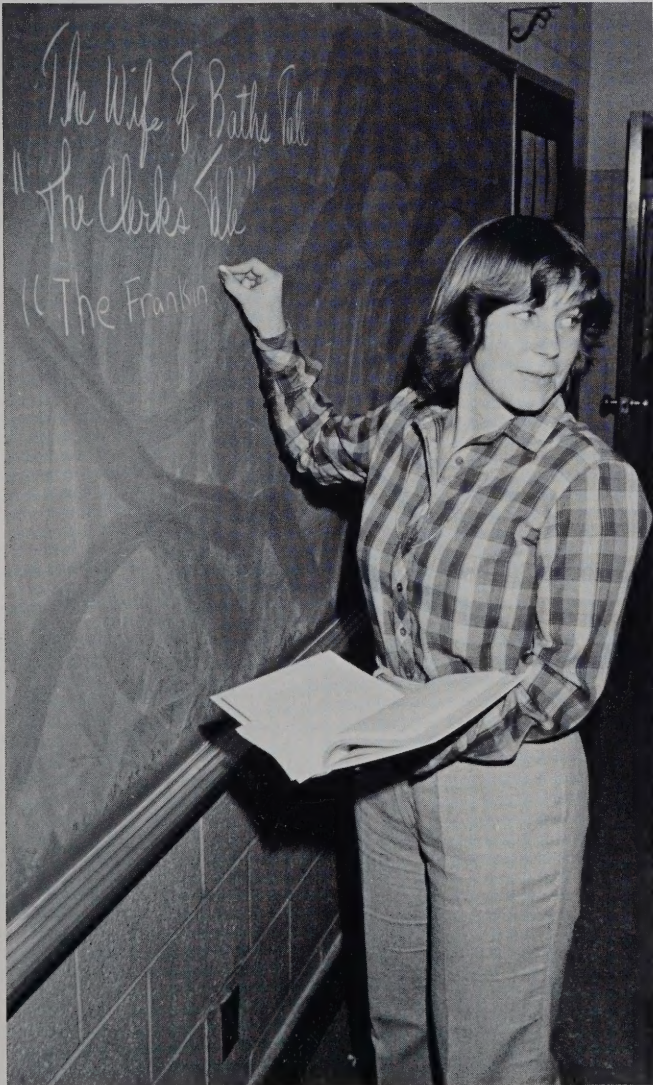

Also along the academic line, seniors face the grueling experience of taking final exams. A few very fortunate ones find themselves exempt from this trial because they have maintained high averages. For the rest, however, the three designated senior exam days are three of the hardest they'll ever endure.

With the pain must come the pleasure, and so it is for graduating seniors. They experience the thrill of ordering caps and gowns, announcements, memory books, and name cards. They join together as a class to choose a parting gift for the school. They plan graduation, choosing speakers and voting on tassels. They also work together to make arrangements for the biggest night of their high school lives — the Senior Prom.

The Senior Prom is the social affair of the year. It is always held in a large ballroom of a local hotel and is usually preceded by a fancy dinner at one of Tidewater's finest restaurants. The evening is an expensive one and must be planned for with care. The girls spend weeks looking for the right dress, and the boys outdo themselves by donning very stylish tuxedos. It is for one and all a perfect evening.

Although the final months of the senior year are very busy ones, the experience gained during this time by the future graduates helps to prepare them for their inevitable departure.

Dan Wolfe and Starletta Williams try out their caps and gowns.

Honor Guard members Gerald Havens, Dave Klingensmith, and James King present the flags.

Miss LaGrasse's class stands to pledge their allegiance to the flag.

In Abstract Terms

At 7:30 in the morning, the Kellam R.O.T.C. Color Guard raises the American flag in front of the school, which heralds in another day for learning. At 9:00, all the students at Kellam stand proudly and pledge allegiance to their country's flag. At 11:00, an English class begins work on a new theme assignment, "What It Means to be an American." At 12:00, a government class becomes embroiled in a discussion on current events and the role Americans must play in the world. At 1:00, students stop outside the cafeteria to study displays dealing with the Armed Forces and to discuss the future with recruiters. At 2:00, cars bearing emblems of the American flag or bumper stickers extolling the benefits of living in America drive out of the parking lots. At 7:30 in the evening, students, teachers, and parents who have gathered in the stadium for a Kellam football game stand at attention as the Kellam Band plays "The Star-Spangled Banner". The day has run its course, and, throughout it, students have touched on or been touched by the essence of patriotism in America. It is a subject which is not listed on class schedules, but it is a subject which is learned well and appreciated by all the Kellam students. An abstract term, patriotism is a reality.

Just as real at Kellam is the feeling of friendship which prevails among the students. This comradeship is evident throughout the day during classes, sports events, club meetings and activities, and those few moments available for socializing.

At Kellam, all students fit in and are accepted on an equal basis. There's no inclination toward prejudice and no time for cliques. Consequently, helping and caring about a fellow classmate comes naturally to the Kellam student.

Friendship is one of the finest gifts a person can give to another, and those friendships formed during the high school years are some of the most enduring. This strong feeling of comradeship has resulted in a closely knit student body, steeped in self-pride and genuine affection and appreciation of others.

"You're someone special at McKellam's Pizza." say Kim Mitchell, Nathaniel Williams, Elaine Wilson, and Anthony Moore.

Science aides Randy Rentner and Elaine Harrison make tea for two.

Madrigals Lora Davis, Cary Fowler, Geri Clark, Bernie Blanks, Kelvin Cooper, and Greg Short display the friendship that is necessary in a successful group.

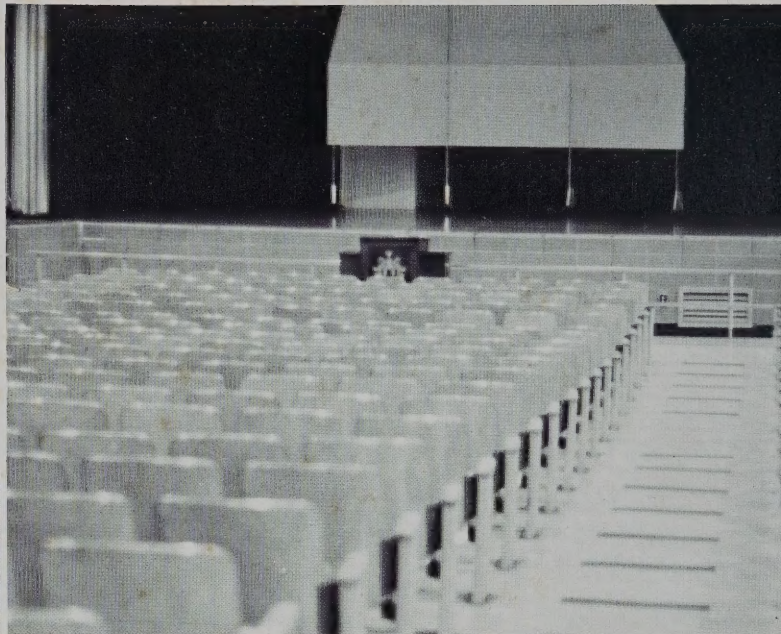

Since we've been friends for so long, I really don't know what to say (kidding) 10 long years of friendship! Have a great summer! Good luck! Love, Holly Budgeong

Not the End: Just Intermission

As in every well-staged production, a respite is needed so that those involved can be given a well-deserved vacation. At Kellam, this break is known as summer vacation, and it commences on the sixteenth of June. It is during this time that the school is given a very thorough cleaning; fresh coats of paint are applied to classroom walls, and lockers, cabinets and shelves are emptied of their year's accumulation.

Before September's new cast enters through Kellam's doors, locker combinations are changed, cafeteria tables and chairs are cleaned and repaired, and the deserted hallway floors are waxed.

Kellam takes on a new look from the gymnasium to the auditorium in preparation for the year ahead.

This,
This is what it'll look like we'll all be back. I hope that I'll see you next year, and I'm sure that we'll have a great time again.

Chris,

Well, here it is, the end of the year, and you have a car and I don't! Peggy's rear end wasn't quite good enough for you, and her body had a few flaws. I think she would have been fast (if you know what I mean), but we'll never know. Along came Fanny, and you were in love! Her body was sleek and flawless, her rear end moves just right. She was fast as they come, but she's not untouchable! Like I said, she has no brains, but one helluva look!

Alright, my model T is slow! She does have a solid body, and is built up well.

~~For my ball!~~ You're the greatest best friend I've ever had, and that's that! You always there for me to cry on your shoulder, You laugh at even my worst jokes, and you're even snootier than Edgar took!

Good luck with Diana Pearson, even though Foy has the edge on you! Good luck in all of your endeavors, and have a good summer!

From one billion-heart friends always,
To another!

To Chris,

What do you say to one of the best friends you've ever had? I guess I'll start by saying you're really sweet. I've enjoyed knowing you for all of these years. We've had alot of fun. The Yearbook stuff, and our wild parties, only added to the fun. No matter where we are we always have fun. You've got to give me a ride in your car! (Before you go to Germany.) You could always give me the keep. while you're gone. (That's all the nice stuff I can say.) Oh, thanks for all of intellectual bits of phenomena! I'll always remember you. (And I'm sure you'll remember me and the band!) Good luck to you always! You've got a long way to go on what you have!
